

Gamblers play over floodwaters

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Undaunted by floodwaters that killed two persons and turned the famed Strip into a mass of mud, gamblers gambled as usual Friday as thousands of tourists jammed this desert resort at the start of a traditionally big weekend.

Shoeless gamblers, pant legs rolled up, continued to plunk coins into slot machines in some casinos as calf-deep water swirled around them after the freak storm Thursday.

Casinos canceled shows Thursday night and gambling dropped off just after the storm, but most resort complexes expected the holiday weekend to be one of the busiest this year.

THE BODIES OF Mike Williams, 30, and Richard Hunkins, 24, both street department employees, were found in muddy embankments Friday near where their truck was engulfed by floodwaters.

Lightning struck several power lines, at least one home, and knocked three radio stations off the air briefly.

Jim Scholl, Clark County flood control engineer, estimated damage to homes, streets and autos in excess of $1 million.

The highway patrol said major highways into the city were clear of water and mud Friday and traffic was heavy despite warnings of more heavy rains and flash flooding through the Fourth of July weekend.

"Highway traffic is clear, but we're asking them not to come to Las Vegas," a spokesman said. "But I think they'll come anyway. It doesn't discourage them."

SEVERAL BRIDGES, underpasses and intersections were washed out and many streets remained inundated or clogged with mud. Police blocked traffic on a half-mile of the Strip from Flamingo Road to Tropical Street.

Water stood 10 feet deep in some low-lying underpasses and parking lots and from the air streets resembled a canal system after Thursday's brief storm spilled 2½ inches of rain.

At Caesars Palace, one of the largest Strip resorts, about 100 cars in a parking lot were under 10 feet of water.

"Caesars is a mess," said a hotel desk employee. "The cars are standing on top of each other, the valet parking lot is really bad. Police are working to clear the mud away and trying to guide traffic around the Strip."

By midday Friday, clear, hot and muggy weather had dried water from most of the streets, leaving them caked with mud and debris.

The entrance to Caesars Palace, hardest hit by flooding, was closed to autos, but hardy gamblers lined up along a narrow walkway to cross a wide mud puddle by way of two small boards placed over the puddle.

Tow trucks and heavy equipment worked through the day removing cars from the mud as tourists crowded sidewalks to watch and snap photographs.

Million swarm local beaches

Crowds estimated at more than a million trooped to Southland beaches Friday for sunbathing, barbecues and Independence Day fireworks displays.

Mostly sunny skies and temperatures in the 70s greeted sunbathers, who often had to suffer through shoreline traffic jams and a lack of beachfront parking before they reached the sand.

Ocean Boulevard in Long Beach and Pacific Coast Highway in the South Bay area and Orange County were sometimes snarled with traffic.

In Long Beach, where lifeguards estimated the crowds at nearly 100,000, shoreline parking lots were jammed most of the day, and police barricaded the filled Junipero Avenue parking lot at about 1:30 p.m.

After darkness came, thousands gathered in and near numerous parks, beaches and stadia for professionally-mounted fireworks displays which marked the 199th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Some spectators came by pleasure boat to watch annual fireworks shows at Long Beach and other beach towns, while some private pilots elected to watch from loftier viewpoints.

In spite of occasional haze or patchy high clouds, an estimated 500,000 persons visited South Bay beaches, while another 200,000 visited the Santa Monica shore.

County lifeguards said about 250,000 holidaymakers went to northern Los Angeles County beaches.

No serious accidents were reported along the shoreline in the Los Angeles-Orange counties metropolitan areas, but lifeguards said there were scores of routine rescues, and many more cases of cut feet and sunburn.

Holiday traffic toll already 127

Associated Press

Traffic accidents across the nation took 127 lives so far as motorists headed into the three-day Fourth of July holiday weekend.

Travel eased in some parts because of thunderstorms or rain. Some vacationers also probably stayed closer to home base because of the recent gasoline price hike of three to five cents a gallon.

The National Safety Council estimated that between 480 and 580 persons may die in traffic accidents during the period from 6 p.m. Thursday to midnight Sunday. On a typical nonholiday weekend in July the council said there would be 430 traffic fatalities.

During a four-day Fourth of July observance last year, the traffic death count was 549. The Independence Day record was 758 in 1972 before the national 55-mile-an-hour speed limit was adopted.

72 injured in Jerusalem

Terrorist bomb kills 13

JERUSALEM (AP) — A refrigerator packed with explosives blew up in front of a toy store on Jerusalem's busiest street Friday, killing 13 persons and wounding 72 in the worst terrorist strike here in 29 years, police said.

A Palestinian guerrilla unit in Lebanon claimed responsibility for the blast that struck as crowds shopped for the Jewish Sabbath.

The state radio said two children were among the dead. One report said

Deborah Levine, a teenager from Richmond, Va., was slightly injured by flying glass.

The worst previous terrorist incident in Jerusalem occurred in July 1946 when guerrillas fighting for Israeli independence bombed the King David Hotel, killing 95 persons.

Shattered glass cut dozens of passers-by in Friday's blast and dazed scores more. A huge crowd gathered and police had to use a small fire hose to keep people back while they evacuated victims and searched for more bombs.

Two postal workers fixing a telephone line were killed instantly, leaving hundreds of phones dead. Windows broke 70 yards away.

David Goldsmith, 31, a free-lance British film maker who was wounded in the explosion, said he saw two halves of a body fly over the hood of his car, and that scores of bodies were strewn all over the pavement, which was totally black from the explosion, "as if someone had poured tar over it."

"There was blood and pieces of bodies everywhere. Blood already was flowing into the gutter ... Some of the victims didn't have any feet at all."

Goldsmith said he and other victims were taken to a hospital in an ambulance, and that in the back was a young girl in a severe state of shock screaming "I'm blind! I'm blind!"

Some Israelis tried to beat up Arab passers-by and stone cars, but police intervened and appealed to the public to keep calm.

Roadblocks went up quickly and about 60 Arabs were detained.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Defense Minister Shimon Peres inspected the site and drove away refusing comment.

Mayor Teddy Kollek said, "Our answer to this dastardly act will be to continue cementing the unification of Jerusalem." Israel captured the Arab sector in 1967 and annexed it.

In Beirut, the Palestinian guerrilla command said, "the Palestinian revolution is responsible for the heroic operation by a unit of the martyr Farid Bobali Squad in the heart of Jerusalem." It did not identify Bobali, but presumably he was a guerrilla killed in a previous attack.

Since April 1974, nearly 100 Israelis have been killed and 300 wounded in Arab terror strikes.

Ford joins 200th year ceremonies

By FRANK CORMIER

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Standing beneath a duplicate of the original Star Spangled Banner, President Ford helped usher in the nation's 200th year Friday night at historic Ft. McHenry.

Ford spoke to a crowd estimated by police at 20,000 after a 30 by 40-foot flag was raised over the fort while July 4th rockets lit the sky and the U.S. Navy Band played the national anthem.

Referring to the bicentennial observance that already has begun, Ford termed it "a celebration of liberty, freedom and democracy — wherever they exist."

He made the speech after witnessing a special session of the U.S. District Court for Maryland, at which Chief Judge Edward S. Northrop administered the naturalization oath to 41 new citizens.

In his address at Ft. McHenry, where "the rocket's red glare" was seen during a War of 1812 battle, the President said:

"THE YOUNG REPUBLIC of yesterday is today a strong and great nation. It still lives the values of its declaration, its Constitution, its Bill of Rights. It still remains — in Lincoln's words — the last, best hope of earth."

"Let us this Fourth of July continue to be a nation of hope. The American people believe in tomorrow — by dawn's early light our flag will still be there."

Francis Scott Key wrote the Star Spangled Banner after witnessing a land-sea battle with the British at Ft. Mifflin in 1814. Harkening back to that day, Ford said:

About 30,000 persons crowded the grounds around Ft. McHenry Friday morning for the bicentennial celebration "By Dawn's Early Light," a reenactment of the bombardment. Blank cannon charges were fired and there were patriotic songs and other entertainment.

The occasion for Ford's visit to Ft. McHenry, however, was an annual "Our Country" ceremony at which a special U.S. District Court session is convened at the fort for the naturalization of several dozen foreign-born residents.

Ford said, "we are honored" by the new citizens, saying, "they have chosen what we often take for granted."

Ford restated a theme he has repeatedly suggested for the nation's third century — that it should be "an era of individual freedom."

"THE MASS APPROACH of the modern world places a premium on creativity and individuality. Mass production, mass education, mass population, must not smother individual expression, or limit individual opportunity," he said.

Ford expressed the hope that the bicentennial observance would "become a true, national experience" and that there would be concentrated study of the nation's history "at every school where the American flag flies."

Earlier Friday, Ford played golf at Burning Tree Country Club in Bethesda, Md.

After the President's appearance at Ft. McHenry, he and Mrs. Ford flew by helicopter to their mountaintop retreat at Camp David, where Ford was to meet today with President Suharto of Indonesia.

Nation ushers in Bicentennial year

By EARLEEN F. TATRO

Indochina refugees got their first taste of Fourth of July celebrations with a patriotic potpourri of parades and politicians, but for some it was a picnic of rice and watermelon instead of hot dogs and potato salad.

In Detroit, flag sales boomed as the United States kicked off its Bicentennial year. In Washington, D.C., a group protesting the commercialization of country's 200th birthday handed out "Forbes of the Year" citations.

The American Indian Movement, which has vowed to "blow out the Bicentennial birthday candle" during 1976, sponsored a four-mile march from Keystone, S.D., to Mt. Rushmore where the stone faces of four U.S. presidents look out over the Black Hills.

At Ft. Indiantown Gap, Pa., 16,000 Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees were introduced to such July 4 traditions as sack races, high school marching bands and red, white and blue bunting.

But the traditional picnic fare of hot dogs, hamburgers and potato salad was not included. A camp spokesman said the refugees would eat their regular meals of rice and meat in the mess halls — with a taste of watermelon after dinner.

Refugees at the other three processing centers also were introduced to Fourth of July festivities.

For the 5,000 refugees at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, the day started at 8 a.m. with a parachute demonstration by the base's combat patrol team. Local politicians delivered speeches, and Vietnamese singer Pham Dui led a sing-along with his Vietnamese translation of "God Bless America."

At Ft. Chaffee, Ark., the marching band from Muskogee, Okla., High School played, clowns frolicked, and a team from Ft. Sill, Okla., put on a sky-diving show for the 23,000 refugees.

The 17,000 refugees at Camp Pendleton, Calif., got "A Little Corner of Americana" of sports, games, prizes and band concerts.

But for 200 of the refugees, the Fourth of July marked the end of their brief stay in America. Returning home with the help of the United Nations, the 200 boarded planes at nearby El Toro Marine Air Station en route to Guam on the first leg in their journey to rejoin their families. Fifty others left Thursday.

One refugee's labor of love, a large concrete sculpture outside the camp processing center, was not quite completed in time for the holiday. Nguyen Luu Dat had hoped to finish the work by Friday. The sculpture, intended to symbolize "Operation New Life," is a giant band cradling two small children, one Cambodian and the other Vietnamese.

Dat, who has already been processed out of the camp, has been returning daily with goggles and a jackhammer to chip at the stone.

In Detroit, the owner of two flag companies said business is booming. "People who have never had an American flag are coming in now to buy one," Robert Erdmans said as he took time out from his busy Fourth of July sale day to talk about the flag business.

300-foot plunge, driver lives

A 40-year-old Rancho Palos Verdes man was injured early Friday when his car went over a 300-foot cliff and was smashed on rocks near the ocean edge in Palos Verdes Estates, police said.

The driver, Michael Warren Saba, of 3300 Paseo Del Mar, told officers he was driving home about 4 a.m. when he lost control of the car and it went over the edge.

Nurses in Torrance Memorial Hospital's intensive care unit reported Saba's condition as "stable."

Investigators said the car dropped from the 700 block of Palos Verdes Drive West.

Two 16-year-old Manhattan Beach surfers,

Michael Hudgens, of 413 10th Place, and Robert Kendrick, address not reported, heard Saba's cries for help about 7:30 a.m.

They went to him, then climbed the cliff to a nearby home to telephone for help.

Palos Verdes Estates firemen raised Saba to the top in a litter and a Coast Guard helicopter flew him to the hospital.

In another accident, a 43-year-old Downey man was killed Friday afternoon when he was struck by a car his father-in-law was driving, as he attempted to open a gate in Westminster.

Police said James O. Irby, of 7725 Yankee St., was pronounced dead at Westminster Community Hospital at 1:25 p.m.

Officers said Irby's father-in-law, Hutton Hughes Armstrong, 69, of 4924 Weik St., Bell, told them he and the victim had gone to a recreational vehicle storage yard in the 6900 block of Garden Grove Boulevard, Westminster, when the accident occurred at 12:40 p.m.

Armstrong told officers that he waited in the idling car while Irby got out to open a chain-link gate. The father-in-law said his foot slipped off the brake, and the car lurched forward, striking Irby.

Acid thrown into '4th' crowd; 40 hurt

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Forty persons attending a Fourth of July fireworks display Friday night were rushed to a hospital after three persons threw acid into the crowd, police said.

Police Chief Frank Giordano said all were treated and released for superficial burns at Carlisle Hospital. About 15 of the victims were young children.

He said three men were being sought.

The incident occurred shortly after 10 p.m. at the conclusion of a fireworks display at Carlisle High School. Witnesses told police that three men standing in front of the stands threw something into the first and second rows while the lights were still out.

The men fled amid the confusion.

Giordano said the injured spectators suffered from an "unidentified, irritating substance causing superficial burns of the eyes and skin."

Pa. state workers end 3-day strike

Combined News Services

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Negotiators for Pennsylvania's biggest state employees union voted Friday to end a crippling strike that sparked three days of turmoil in state departments and on the picket lines. By a voice vote, the union negotiators approved a settlement that will hike wages 57 cents an hour — although the workers will get only a 16-cent-a-hour hike this year because of a tight state budget. Gov. Milton Shapp had threatened to reject any settlement that exceeded the $27.5 million earmarked in his budget for wage increases during the new fiscal year. He said anything above a 3.5 per cent hike would mean a tax increase. The union's immediate 16-cent raise comes to 3.5 per cent.

Meantime, New Yorkers woke up Friday to the usually unwelcome sound of trash cans clanging on pavement as garbage men dug the city out from under more than 50,000 tons of festering refuse which had piled up during a three-day wildcat strike.

FBI copter crashes

PINE RIDGE, S.D. — The FBI said a helicopter crash-landed Friday evening on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, where a manhunt for the killers of two FBI agents has been going on for a week. No injuries were reported in the crash. FBI agents have been combing the area looking for the persons they say shot and killed two FBI agents attempting to serve warrants on the reservation last week.

Hog cholera outbreak

WASHINGTON — The first U.S. outbreak of hog cholera in more than a year has been confirmed in a herd near Hereford, Texas, the Agriculture Department announced Friday. Officials said the 170-hog herd owned by Louis Woodford has been quarantined and will be destroyed to keep the disease from spreading. Hog cholera, a costly and often fatal swine disease, is highly infectious and can spread rapidly. It does not, however, affect other animals or human beings.

India bans 26 political parties

NEW DELHI — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government stepped up efforts to crush opposition Friday by banning 26 political parties and groups in the most sweeping crackdown in India's 28 years of independence. The ban, imposed eight days after the prime minister decreed a state of emergency throughout the nation of 600 million, outlaws virtually all extremist political parties and organizations on the left and the right. It does not affect the major national opposition parties, but many of the leaders of those groups are already in jail. The government said the parties banned were "indulging in activities prejudicial to the internal security, public safety and maintenance of public order."

Argentina general strike

BUENOS AIRES — National labor leaders Friday night called for a two-day general strike across the country, forcing a showdown with President Maria Estela "Isabel" Peron in Argentina's gravest crisis in more than two years. Key leaders of the 2.5-million-member General Labor Confederation asked all shops, factories and public services in Argentina to shut down for 48 hours beginning Monday. The strike decision came after more than a week of negotiations between labor and government leaders failed to achieve a compromise on the country's economic crisis. The labor movement was the strongest supporter of Mrs. Peron's government until June 26 when it rebelled against the administration's decision to slash negotiated wage increases.

Chile bars U.N. probers

SANTIAGO, Chile — President Gen. Augusto Pinochet announced Friday night his government will not permit a United Nations human rights investigation committee to enter Chile. The committee was due to arrive July 10 for a two-week investigation of charges of alleged violations of human rights by the military junta government. As late as Thursday the Chilean foreign minister said that the military government would cooperate with the U.N. commission in its investigation.

Prisoner frees hostage

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. — An inmate who had threatened to cut the throat of a prison barber with a straight razor released his captive unharmed Friday in exchange for guarantees of psychiatric treatment, Canadian government officials said. Robert Garry Hume, 23, serving a 14-year sentence for seven counts of armed robbery and awaiting trial on attempted murder and other charges, had held a straight-edge razor to the throat of hostage John Rocheleau and demanded guaranteed psychiatric treatment in return for his release.

Kidnaped woman freed

CALGARY, Alta. — The wife of a bank manager was released unharmed Friday shortly after a $247,000 ransom was paid to her kidnapers, police said. Gale Tunncliffe, 26, was found handcuffed and gagged in a van near her house. Three gunmen broke into the house Thursday, tied up her husband Ken, and kept her in another room. Police said on Friday morning one of the gunmen accompanied Tunncliffe to the Imperial Bank of Commerce branch, where the bank's accountant met them and handed over the ransom. The gunman then fled with the money. The two other gunmen put Mrs. Tunncliffe in the van, meanwhile, then apparently joined the other gunman.

Soviet aircraft carrier

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The Soviet Union's first aircraft carrier — the Kiev — is having its first trials in the Black Sea, according to a source in this capital of the North Atlantic alliance. The Soviets already have two helicopter carriers, the Moskva and the Leningrad, but the Kiev is a craft of a different type. For many years, Soviet strategists made light of aircraft carriers — they called them sifting ducks that would be easy to take out in the early hours of a war.

2 Ohio teens puncture President's security

Combined News Services

Two teen-age Cincinnati waitresses punctured the tight security around President Ford during his visit to Cincinnati, but Secret Service agents helped the gate-crashing.

Pappy Noel was up to his old tricks again, risking the wrath of the men assigned to protect the President. Noel, a top press aide, issued an informal invitation to Nancy Teimeier, 18, and Shelia McManus, 17, after they served him hamburgers at a downtown fast-food restaurant.

"We thought he was kidding," said a stunned Miss Teimeier. "Then he showed us his White House credentials."

"It's really unbelievable," said Miss McManus. "My parents just aren't going to believe this."

Noel's high-heartedness keeps him in hot water with Ford's security force. "I'm probably going to catch heck for this," said the 54-year-old father of four. "But I just love to see young people who are interested in politics, especially in this day and age."

With a note from Noel, the two young women showed up at the Convention Center where Ford was meeting 800 delegates to a regional conference Thursday. Their first bid to gain entrance failed when a security guard at the door turned them away.

They tried again. This time a Secret Service agent said he would take the note to Noel. Minutes later, the agent returned with instructions to escort the girls to the main conference room. Noel greeted them and had them seated.

Medalist

Comedian Bob Hope became on Friday only the third American to receive the Philadelphia Freedom Medal.

The medal, also known as the President's Medal since its other two recipients were former chief executives Herbert Hoover (in 1961) and Harry S. Truman (in 1962), was presented to Hope during ceremonies at Independence Hall by Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo.

Actor Joel Grey read the Declaration of Independence, and the Liberty Bell was symbolically tapped, setting off extensive bell ringing as Philadelphia ended its Freedom Week celebration and began observance of the Bicentennial year.

Last resort

Arkansas Gov. David Pryor, stranded at a deserted air field four miles from where he was to make a Fourth of July speech, did the only thing he could — he hitchhiked.

Fog prevented the governor's plane from landing at the airport where he was expected. So, after the unscheduled landing, Pryor and three aides walked to the highway and flagged down a pickup truck. Pryor and one aide climbed in the cab, while the other two rode in the truck bed.

Arriving a little late for his scheduled appearance in Piggot, Ark., Pryor said the trip from the airfield to the site of the town's annual picnic was "some kind of ride."

Carradine

Veteran actor and director John Carradine wed his fourth wife in Oxnard at a quiet church wedding attended only by family and a few friends.

A family spokesman said Carradine, 69, married Emily Cisneros, 50, of Santa Barbara on Thursday. A family spokesman said the couple met at a social gathering.

Carradine, who played roles ranging from light comedy to Shakespeare, is the father of David Carradine, star of the popular television series "Kung Fu." Carradine's former wife, Doris, died in an apartment fire in 1971. The couple was separated at the time.

Actress weds

Actress Karen Black, 32, and L.M. "Kit" Carson, 33, a free-lance writer, exchange marriage vows during dawn ceremony Friday in Beverly Hills. Couple then joined 400 guests in traditional Fourth of July picnic reception. Delayed accounting

In May you said the Paper Specialties Federal Credit Union, 1820 E. Florence Ave., Los Angeles, was being liquidated because of poor management and that members would get all of their money back in a few weeks. I had heard no word from them and after repeated attempts, I gained admittance to their office and was told they have no records that show I am a member. The money I had in the credit union was to be used for my vacation this year. Can you help? J.D., Long Beach.

A LITTLE LEARY.

A WOLF IS LIKE A GOOD DETERGENT. HE WORKS FAST AND LEAVES NO RINGS.

You are listed as a member and you and the other members will get all of your money back, but not for several months. Confusion over your membership apparently arose because you have changed your name. The early estimate for returning credit union savings shares had to be revised, according to Harold Forbus, liquidation specialist with the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) in San Francisco. He said the spokesman for the NCUA hadn't discovered the credit union records were in arrears since the first of the year. The records are now being reconstructed and this is a slow process which will take another three to four months to complete, Forbus said. Members who have changed their names or addresses should write to the Paper Specialties Federal Credit Union, in care of Rockwell Federal Credit Union, P.O. Box 911, Downey, Calif. 90241. Your credit union savings shares are insured up to $40,000 by the NCUA.

On loan

I recently read that President Ford plans to help the small businessman. I need a business loan to help pay my taxes and I'd like to know if there is any government agency that can help me. B.B., Long Beach.

Your chances of getting a government loan are virtually nil. The Small Business Administration currently is issuing very few loans because of cutbacks in federal funds for this agency. An SBA spokesman said there have been unconfirmed reports that legislation will be introduced in Congress to appropriate additional funds for small business loans, but even if more money is allocated, there currently is a long waiting list of applicants. For more information, contact the SBA, 849 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Calif. 90014, 888-2956. In a recent speech, President Ford vowed to assist small businessmen by establishing a Federal Paperwork Commission to reduce the number of forms businessmen have to file with the government. But he did not advocate funding more government loans.

Diving trips

I've heard there are charter boats that take skin divers over to Catalina, but I don't know where to get details on these trips. B.S., Long Beach.

Most diving equipment shops offer such excursions. Four Southland shops that do are Pacific Sporting Goods, 16214 Pacific Coast Highway, Sunset Beach, 592-1379; Scuba-Tech, 9422 E. Alondra Blvd., Bellflower, 866-6794; Lyle A. Heskin & Son Water Sports Equipment, 1220 W. Coast Highway, Newport Beach, (714) 548-7673; and Dive N' Surf, 504 N. Broadway, Redondo Beach, 372-8423. There also are several independent boat operators who organize skin diving excursions and you can get more information on these trips by contacting the 22nd Street Landing, 141 W. 22nd St., San Pedro, 832-8304, or Norm's Landing, Berth 79, San Pedro, 547-9916.

Boy shot in back dies after surgery

Guy Patrick Lynch, the 12-year-old Lakewood boy who was shot in the back Wednesday as he walked home from a Paramount swimming pool, died Friday at Paramount General Hospital, sheriff's deputies reported.

Lynch, of 8034 Garden-sale St., had been reported in critical condition since undergoing surgery at the hospital Wednesday afternoon.

Deputies said Lynch and two friends were walking home along the Southern California Edison right-of-way near Merkel Street at 1:38 p.m. Wednesday when someone fired a shot from a passing car. Lynch was struck once in the back, investigators said.

Deputies said Friday there have been no arrests in the case, and they are seeking two youths in connection with the shooting. Witnesses said the young gunman in the apparently motiveless shooting was accompanied by another youth in a 1965 or 1966 Buick or Buick Riviera.

Baby-killer suspect

SAN BERNARDINO (AP) — An Azusa man has been booked for investigation of murder after he was seen allegedly trying to dispose of his baby son's body by throwing it in brush near a highway, authorities said.

Larry Nooner, 25, was booked after witnesses reported seeing Nooner carry the baby from an auto parked along California route 330 Thursday and then toss the body into heavy brush, sheriff's deputies said.

Authorities said they believe 5-month-old Shawn was killed sometime Thursday. Deputies located the body in the brush and said the child had numerous skull fractures.

Air balloon blaze mars holiday show

VAN NUYS (UPD) — A fire blazed through a hot air balloon at an Independence Day air show Friday, injuring the pilot and a young spectator. Five firemen were overcome by fumes in fighting the blaze.

Zane Meyers, 40, was filling the balloon from a butane heater when the tank exploded, started the fire and ripped a hole in the balloon, officials of the Aviation Fair '75 at Van Nuys Airport said.

Meyers suffered burns on his hands and legs and Gary McArdle, 9, who was watching the operation was burned on the legs. Both were reported in satisfactory condition at separate hospitals.

Fire fighters of the Air National Guard knocked down the flames within minutes, but five firemen were overcome by fumes and were treated at the scene.

The fire caused an estimated $9,000 damage to the balloon and equipment.

Elsewhere, brush fire blackened some 40 acres near exclusive homes east of Whittier Friday but fire fighters said none of the homes were threatened by the blaze.

The fire erupted at mid-afternoon in the Hacienda Heights area and fire officials predicted it would be contained by early evening.

Nearly a dozen engine companies, backed by two helicopters making water drops, eight hand crews and support equipment were rushed to the scene. Cause of the blaze was not immediately known.

Plane flips over

MALIBU (UPI) — A light plane flipped over in a crash-landing on a beach at Paradise Cove Friday and the pilot, Wayne K. Glen, 23, was hospitalized for treatment of shock.

Steam bus plans on tap

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California taxpayers may be footing a $400,000 bill for a third state steam vehicle experiment as the result of last-minute legislative maneuvering on the new state budget.

The budget, signed earlier this week, contains an authorization for $400,000 to be spent developing "a low-polluting, energy efficient alternative to the internal combustion engine."

The Assembly already had fostered two experimental steam engine projects, one producing three steam buses and the other two steam cars. None of the vehicles has led to production plans.

Now lawmakers envision a steam taxi or minibus to be used by commuters in high pollution areas. And a major campaign contributor, Cornelius Dutcher, who participated in the two previous experiments, could well win the contract for the third project.

The new project was inserted into the budget without the usual hearings by a two-house conference committee at the urging of Assemblymen Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, and Terry Goggin, D-San Bernardino.

Lanterman, a committee member, indicated clearly in an interview the funding was intended for Dutcher, owner of Steam Power Systems of San Diego. He said Dutcher had developed a two-cylinder "pancake" steam engine and needed extra funding to develop a prototype model that would be used in San Bernardino and Riverside.

Dutcher is a longtime Democratic contributor who last year gave more than $133,000 to primary and general election campaigns, primarily of legislators.

Normally state contracts are subject to competitive bidding.

"I don't care if there is any criticism of this or not," Lanterman volunteered when asked about the new project. "We spill that much around here."

Former Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti drew criticism two years ago when the Assembly quietly approved $1.5 million in taxpayer-financed steam car contracts, especially since Moretti later received a $5,000 campaign donation from Dutcher.

One steam car contract went to Dutcher and the other to Aerojet. The cars proved to be nearly smog-free but poor in gasoline mileage. Dutcher and Aerojet wound up keeping the experimental cars after the project was completed.

The earlier steam bus project was funded by the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Dutcher developed one of three steam buses.

Lanterman said steam power was "a hobby" with Dutcher, whom he said "should not be criticized for it. He's spent millions on it and I think he should be praised" for developing a low-pollution vehicle.

Lanterman, whose brother is a steam power enthusiast, said he was approached by Goggin about the $400,000 authorization for the Air Resources Board to conduct the program. Lanterman said he urged the authorization be inserted into the new budget only with assurances Goggin had obtained "clearance from everyone" for the project. ARB Chairman Tom Quinn said he did not know Dutcher was involved and only had a brief explanation by Goggin.

Goggin said the project would not necessarily go to Dutcher, although he toured Dutcher's plant while a congressional aide. Goggin said the funds could be used to develop any type of useful low-smog vehicle for government agencies. He said it could even be a battery-powered street sweeper.

"I have no particular feeling one way or the other" on which firm should get the project, said Goggin, who campaigned on a platform of fighting smog. He said the state should produce its own low-polluting vehicle to "hit Detroit over the head" in trying to force major auto makers to develop smog-free cars.

But Lanterman indicated-ed-Dutcher was the only producer who could provide a prototype of a low-polluting vehicle for $400,000. This is possible, he said, because Dutcher already has a federal grant for a steam taxi and has spent millions of his own money on steam vehicle research.

The state money would be used to develop a "power train" for a steam taxi or minibus, Lanterman said.

Goggin said he presented the proposal in the waning days of negotiations on the new state budget because he was a freshman and was unfamiliar with exactly how he should present his idea.

Brown's July 4
just a work day

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown, who has taken only one weekday off in six months — his birthday last April 7 — was in his office working "on a bunch of bills" Friday afternoon.

Press aide David Jensen said the 37-year-old bachelor governor came in on Independence Day because he wanted to clear his desk to have a free weekend.

"He had hoped not to work," said Press Secretary Bill Stall, "but he had about 30 bills that had to be acted on by midnight Saturday or midnight Sunday. He wanted to have the weekend free."

"He wanted to get everything cleared off so he could possibly take Monday off," Stall said.

The first-term Democratic governor shows no sign of slowing a hectic pace after nearly six months in office, Stall said.

"It's amazing," he said. "He can take one day off and come back as fresh as if he'd been gone a week."

None of the bills that required action before Sunday was described by Jensen as major. Brown has 12 days to sign or veto a bill.

A bill reducing penalties for marijuana possession didn't gain final legislative passage until June 26, and is not among those facing the weekend deadline.

If it's cheap, it's not Europe

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Europe costs considerably more than $5 a day for anyone who eats out in Paris, has clothes dry-cleaned in Stockholm and buys a bottle of Scotch in Oslo, a cost-of-living survey said Friday.

The survey by Business International said London charges the most for one night in an American-style hotel, and a man's suit costs the most in Geneva.

Athens and Dublin were found to be the cheapest places for most items except for Milan, where Scotch costs less than anywhere else.

Business International listed the three most expensive and the three most reasonable cities for each category as follows:

- Three-course dinner for four: most expensive Paris, The Hague, Stockholm; least expensive Athens, Rome, Dublin.
- Two-bedroom unfurnished apartment: most expensive Paris, London, Zurich; least expensive Dublin, Brussels, The Hague.
- Single room at a good hotel: most expensive London, Amsterdam and Paris; least expensive

Dublin, Madrid, Barcelona.

—Live-in maid: most expensive Stockholm, The Hague and Copenhagen; least expensive Lisbon, Madrid and Dublin.

—Woman's ready-to-wear dress: Paris, Geneva and Zurich at the top of the scale; Dublin, Athens and Brussels the cheapest.

—Man's two-piece ready-made business suit: most expensive Geneva, Paris and Copenhagen, least expensive Dublin, Rome and Milan.

Dry-cleaning a man's suit: Stockholm, Oslo and Copenhagen the costliest, Athens, Dublin and London the cheapest.

A bottle of Scotch: Oslo, Stockholm and Copenhagen at the top, Milan, Rome, London and The Hague at the bottom.

Calif. wines 'gay,' French tasters admit

PARIS (UPI) — What Frenchman wouldn't be loath to admit it—that American wine is better than French?

But the French are willing enough to make a gesture toward the Americans. They say they are willing to taste it.

Organized by British wine salesman Steven Spurrier, the French Wine Academy sponsored a special Californian wine-tasting in honor of the Fourth of July Independence Day activities in Paris Friday.

The reactions were mixed and did anyone dare say, prejudiced?

'Natural food' ads canceled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FTC has ruled that the TV commercial which shows naturalist Euell Gibbons asking: "Ever eat a pine tree? ... Many parts are edible," actually persuades some children to go out and try it.

That and other commercials showing Gibbons munching on cattails, high bush cranberries and the like are bad for children, the agency said, because youngsters without Gibbons' expertise may go out and eat dangerous branches and plants after watching the ads.

The FTC announced Friday that General Foods Corp., which ran the Gibbons "natural food" campaign for "Grape Nuts" cereal, has agreed to stop running commercials which depict plants as edible in their natural state.

General Foods said in a statement that it voluntarily withdrew its commercials about "edible wild foods" nearly a year ago.

FTC's complaint cited four commercials showing Gibbons, author of natural food books, eating or describing as edible cattails, pine trees, high bush cranberries and the fruit of the prickly pear cactus.

"The advertisements have the tendency or capacity to influence children to eat plants or parts thereof which they find growing or in natural surroundings," the FTC said. "Some plants or parts thereof are harmful if eaten."

"A substantial number of children do not have sufficient knowledge or experience to distinguish between those plants or parts thereof which are and those which are not harmful if eaten," it added.

General Foods said that, while it did not agree with the FTC and admitted no guilt, it saw little to be gained by protracted litigation and therefore signed a consent order banning such ads.

Star Trek fans stage convention

ATLANTA (AP) — "Star Trek Lives," read the banners that greeted followers of the science fiction television series who began arriving Friday for a three-day convention.

Trivia contests, costume competitions, art auctions, science fiction movies and a 30-minute reel of Star Trek bloopers are on the agenda.

DeForest Kelley, who played Dr. McCoy in the series, and James Doohan, who played Chief Engineer "Scotty" Scott, are scheduled to join in panel discussions and sign autographs.

NBC canceled Star Trek, a creation of author-producer Gene Roddenberry, in 1969. The reruns of the 79 episodes have been shown on 142 stations in the United States and in 50 countries.

Connie Fleming, 33, an Air Force captain stationed at Dobbins Air Force Base in Marietta, Ga., said 1,200 participants were expected "from all over the country."

"The reason I like Star Trek is that it's a very positive show about the future," said Steve Reed, a high school senior from Marietta, Ga., who helped plan the convention. "Star Trek says there is a future ... that it's not all over yet."

The flyers advertising the convention read, "Star Trek Lives."

Participants pay a $10 registration fee with proceeds earmarked for the Gene L. Coon Memorial Fund, a cancer research fund in Los Angeles. Coon was the original Star Trek producer and one of the writers.

Sharks seen near 'Jaws' filming site

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (UPI) — Police at Edgartown, Mass., location of the movie "Jaws," said Friday a school of small sand sharks had been reported near the town beach and a more dangerous blue tip shark had been sighted two miles east.

"The dog fish (sand shark) won't bother you usually. If you bump into them, they may do something but they're not out looking for something to eat," said Martha's Vineyard island policeman Mrs. Carmen Salvador.

Mrs. Salvador confirmed Coast Guard reports that the blue tip, not commonly seen near beach waters, was seen about 8:45 p.m. Thursday.

"People are still going into the water but lifeguards are warning bathers about the dog fish," said Mrs. Salvador.

She said sand sharks were not unusual near the town beach, but in previous years they appeared later in the summer.

Mrs. Salvador said, however, blue tip sharks generally are only 200 to 300 pounds and rarely swim into shallow public bathing waters.

From kindergarten on Consumer classes growing

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press

Officials in a small, but steadily growing number of states are bringing consumerism into the classroom to try to teach pupils from kindergarten through high school the ABCs of the market place.

A report by the Office of Consumer Affairs showed that four states — Florida, Kentucky, Oregon and Wisconsin — passed legislation last year requiring mandatory consumer education courses.

Three states, Alaska, Hawaii and Illinois, already had some sort of mandatory program; California, Indiana and West Virginia are studying the possibility of such a project; and numerous other cities, school districts and states are instituting voluntary consumer courses.

"Both the quality and the quantity of consumer education courses have jumped sharply in recent years," said a spokesman for the Office of Consumer Affairs.

At Christmas, for example, Mrs. Fernstrom said, pupils could make a list of advertisements for toys they saw and liked. Then the class could look at the toy and compare it with the ad.

Young children also could set up a make-believe store to learn money-saving buying techniques and shopping manners.

As students get older, the consumer courses in Washington and elsewhere get more sophisticated, dealing with items such as consumer legislation, budgeting practices, warranties and credit.

Integrating consumer education into other courses at the high school level is not difficult, Mrs. Fernstrom said. Chemistry pupils can analyze ingredients in food items or make tests of clothing labeled flameproof; English pupils can use reading skills to study contracts; art pupils can create their own advertisements and learn what appeals to consumers; math pupils can learn to figure interest rates and balance check-books.

Many consumer education courses are still combined with traditional home economics studies and, in some areas, the enrollment is overwhelmingly female. But the pattern is changing somewhat. More than 1,000 boys enrolled last year in combined consumer-home-making courses in Idaho, for example.

One problem remaining for authorities is how to teach the teachers. Officials in Washington are working with retailers and area universities to try to set up a formal training program. In other regions, according to the Office of Consumer Affairs, school districts are running special "refresher" courses.

Legislation requiring consumer education courses in California also provided a $100,000 budget for the program and directed the state superintendent of schools to appoint a seven-member advisory committee, including one lawyer, one economist, one retailer or wholesaler, one representative of lending institutions, one consumer, one consumer protection specialist and one additional person.

A report on progress in setting up the consumer education program is due next Jan. 1. The Legislature directed that the program include fundamentals of banking for personal use, elementary contracts, uses and costs of credit, types and costs of insurance and forms of government taxation.

MOST of the consumer courses are taught at the junior and senior high school level, but there are efforts to start the special education programs earlier. The Florida program now being developed will involve kindergarten through 12th grade; the California plan will cover grades seven to 12.

Consumer education courses have been available on a voluntary basis in Washington, D.C., for several years and officials are expanding the program in the coming year, incorporating consumerism into subjects like English, science and art and starting the teaching at the kindergarten level.

What can a kindergarten pupil learn about consumerism?

A lot, says Meredith Fernstrom of the District of Columbia Office of Consumer Affairs.

"A child is very much aware of goods and services," she said.

Learning where pencils, crayons and paper come from and how to share them can help a child understand supply and demand, Mrs. Fernstrom said. Other possibilities for kindergarten consumerism are explanations of denominations of money and studies of advertising.

How AA 'grabs all the gusto'

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — "You only go around once. You've got to grab all the gusto you can," the smiling, portly Canadian lawyer told a companion at a coffee shop.

The lawyer from Alberta, who mimicked a commercial about the "gusto" in drinking beer, was one of 20,000 members of Alcoholics Anonymous on hand for AA's 40th international convention Friday.

THE gathering had an air of jolly fellowship not normally associated with the group's sober image.

"It's one of our secrets," said conventioneer John M., an ebullient gray-haired man. "We're a happy bunch of people. Give the crying towels to somebody else."

The former drinkers and their families began a three-day series of speeches, panel discussions and films.

"You can call it more a celebration — a party, if you will," said Walter M., an AA member from New York.

"We are people joined together by one thing — a powerlessness over alcohol. To recover from that, and to be able to help others as well, is really a very wonderful thing."

Conventioners from 29 countries held two rousing get-acquainted dances Thursday night — one with rock bands, the other traditional.

NAACP calls for minority job protection

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, concluding its 68th annual convention here, called Friday on civil rights enforcement agencies, the courts and Congress to protect the job rights of minorities and women during the recession.

The nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization asked the government to act to protect minorities and women from being victims of the traditional "last-hired, first-fired" approach to cutting back the labor force.

"This empowers us to go ahead with increased vigor in our efforts to take up the cudgels for black workers," said Roy Wilkins, executive director of the association.

The process of retiring Wilkins as executive director. The board reportedly will place the burden of most external and internal responsibilities of the director on two staff people — Mildred Bond Roxborough and Gloucester Current — and has initiated the search for a successor to the 74-year-old Wilkins, who has worked for 40 years for the organization.

AT A NEWS conference Friday, Wilkins confirmed only that Mrs. Roxborough would assist him in the immediate future.

The resolutions session ended in abrupt confusion Friday afternoon when the chairman, Wendell Erwin of Cleveland, accepted an adjournment motion and said the room had to be cleared for preparations for the association's concluding dinner Friday night.

A number of resolutions failed to be considered because of the time limit, including condemning Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit for his outspoken opposition to NAACP pressure for integrating Detroit schools.

YOUNG, Detroit's first black mayor, had called NAACP lawyers "carpet-baggers" in his city, a charge reminiscent of the reactions of Southern white politicians a decade ago when they opposed civil rights activity.

Before the adjournment, the association passed a number of amendments on civil rights, education and foreign affairs, including the following:

—A statement in support of full-employment legislation, including a measure introduced in the House by Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., that would make a good-paying job a right of every citizen willing to work.

—Condemnation of Prof. James Coleman's statements that he was having misgivings about his previous endorsement of some school integration tactics because of "white flight" to the suburbs to escape desegregation.

Kennedy hears plea

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (AP) — About 50 persons from a social action agency visited the beach on the Kennedy compound Friday and spoke briefly with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. But they had to get in the back way.

The group, which was expected by the Kennedys, was met by a line of policemen at the street entrance to the compound when they tried to get in the front way.

But the delegates from the Revitalization Corps in Hartford, Conn., met no resistance when they went to a public beach near the compound and walked to the beach by the senator's home.

Ned Coll, director of the corps, said he wanted to spend some time with the Kennedy family, trying to persuade it to set an example to the nation by publicly sharing part of its holiday with poor people.

Coll said the corps was inspired by the late President John F. Kennedy.

People and ideas

Everything is religion

By MARK CLUTTER
Religion Editor

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

"Well, you are outside my field. I don't have any religion," a man told the Religion Editor.

His remark is worth thinking about. It is possible to have no church, but is it possible to have no religion?

What is religion?

It is easy to give terse, precise definitions of a specific religion. Christianity, for example, is a way of life based on the teachings and life of Christ.

But is there a definition of religion that would be acceptable to Buddhists, Moslems and Christians? Or hard-shelled Communists?

Let's discuss one possible definition:

Religion is a way of life based upon one's understanding of man's place in the universe.

By that definition, every human being is religious. And his every action is expressive of his religion.

It will be objected that, except for the very best and very worst of men, human beings live muddled and inconsistent lives.

Of course. But their views of their place in the universe are muddled and inconsistent.

WHO AM I? This most important question cannot be answered by cool intellect alone. A man's view of his place in the universe must be colored by his personality and his culture. No man lives alone. He is part of his history.

Language is a religious thing. Each language represents a people's view of their place in the universe. Some ideas cannot be readily translated in closely related languages like English and German. Chinese represents a strikingly different view of life.

Nor does a doctrine completely link men together. The Russians and the Chinese are devout Communists, but they are very different breeds of cat who will probably go to war with each other. This is no new thing. Multitudes of Christians reciting the same creed in different languages have fought each other.

Who am I? Any man truly seeking an answer must think of himself — his experiences, his emotional pattern, what he really wants from life. Perhaps if he can get a little glimpse of what kind of guy he is he can start talking to God.

ORGANIZED religion has much to offer anyone who is seeking personal identity. It is rather sad that so many people become Jesus freaks or drift off into stranger cultic ways. Some of them may find their way back.

Organized religion does have answers based on millennia of thought and experience. True, some of the answers in some of the churches may be wrong-headed or bigotted or — worst heresy of all — dull. But the flame of truth glows in the ecclesiastical darkness.

It is important to find a center for one's beliefs.

THE IDEA that everything human is religion can be easily observed up and down the street.

People say "I think —," "I believe —," "I gotta right —," "Go to hell."

These are crude religious assertions. And if you get acquainted with any person you will discover yearnings and ideals, often vague and confused, which tell you that they are trying to discover their identity and their relationship to the universe.

ENEMY OF CHRISTIANITY

A woman writes in a letter to "Dear Abby," "Last week my cousin, a devout young Jewish woman, died a slow, agonizing death. Everyone remembered her as a person who had never said an unkind word about anyone."

"I discussed her death with my minister, hoping to get some consolation and assurance that she was now in heaven."

He said, "She is not in heaven because she didn't believe in Jesus Christ."

Who does this arrogant little pulpeteer think he is? God Almighty?

"Christians" of his ilk have done more harm to Christianity than all the atheists.

CATHOLICS AS PURITANS

American Catholics are strongly influenced by the Puritan tradition, says Anthony T. Padovano, a theologian, in St. Anthony Messenger magazine.

Puritans, he says, are people who can break with tradition, who believe in much self-examination, who seek to purify themselves from guilt and who want instant perfection.

"The American frequently devised impossible ideals for his own life. He lacks, as Jacques Maritain observes, patience with the progress of his own life. He wants perfection and quickly. He dreams of ascending a ladder of success as Jacob once dreamed of climbing rung by rung into heaven. He wants a perfect marriage, ideal children, a nation with no blemishes, a Church without spot or wrinkle in even its most human form."

The Vatican Council and the dissent and division since then, therefore, came as shock to American Catholics. They wanted a perfect church.

"There is no perfection on this earth. . . . The Church is a miracle in its survival rather than its sinfulness; it is a great community because its errors never overcame its truth."

WATERGATE CONVERTS

"Prison wasn't a seminary," said Jeb Stuart Magruder, convicted Watergate figure who has turned to a full-time professional religious career. He is with Young Life, a nondenominational youth organization which directs 1,000 clubs in 300 cities. He is vice president in administration and communications. Magruder, 40, a life-long United Presbyterian, said that Watergate was "just the last thing" that caused him to change his goals in life.

Others who have made new Christian commitments are Egil Krogh and Charles W. Colson. John Ehrlichman says he now wants to "work for the welfare of others."

Adults can change the goals and patterns of their lives. Good luck to the Watergate converts.

SOME PEOPLE are always yearning for a "Savior." Others are always willing to gratify such desires — for a fee.

To the Religion Desk came a fine, well-made brochure which promises everything one would want to know about how to live in this life and all future lives. The movement promises to reveal "ancient, secret wisdom."

The "prophet" must be a man of charm. Newspaper people have the reputation of being tough-minded, cynical, sophisticated types, but he conned at least two into writing glamorous features about him and his "wisdom" for metropolitan papers.

All these religious movements — they are a dime a dozen and they make millions for their promoters — should be avoided. Some may contain a smidgen of truth, but they are really con games. Often their esoteric doctrines and practices drive their unstable converts into insanity.

Standard churches offer more wisdom than anyone could possibly assimilate. True, it varies in quality and kind from church to church, but it is all based on the hard-won truths of human beings from the dawn of history.

But that is the hard way to salvation. True religion requires both thought and action. There are always the fall guys who want to buy "instant salvation."

Let the buyer beware!

Prayer is center of nun's career

A happy way of life

By MARK CLUTTER

What is it like to be a nun?

"For me it is and has always been a happy life," said Sister Jane Frances, teacher and dean of girls at St. Anthony's High School.

The happiness shows. She has a calm, self-confident, rather professorial manner as she talks about the religious vocation and the world.

"What kind of girl should become a nun?" she was asked.

"I don't think we can make generalities," she said. "Nuns are just people with various personalities, temperaments and talents."

"I think the only generality one can make is that a sister must be devoted to prayer. Prayer is the center of our lives. We pray together and we pray alone. We seek to make all our work a prayer."

"I think that the kind of girl best suited for a religious vocation has a warm, outgoing personality."

"Many young girls, troubled by the stresses of growing up, have romantic dreams of being nuns. They think they would be free of their problems in a convent."

"That idea — which is the idea of the general public — is not true. A religious vocation is not a hideaway, not a refuge. We are very much involved with the world. Ours is a life of self-sacrifice for the good of all humanity."

This is especially true, she believes, of cloistered nuns. Such sisters have no contact with the ordinary world. They live in houses without windows and follow very strict disciplines.

"They are a little exten-

SISTER JANE FRANCES

sion of heaven," Sister Jane Frances said. "They are the powerhouse because their entire life is devoted to prayer. It is very necessary to have them. I wish you could see their beautiful faces."

Sister Jane Frances is far from cloistered. She is a member of the Sisters of St. Francis of Syracuse (N.Y.). The community was founded shortly before the Civil War in conditions of hardship. Service is their rule. They are teachers and nurses. They have founded hospitals.

In the last century the king of Hawaii invited them to Honolulu to care for lepers. Then the famous Father Damien asked their help on the island of Molokai. That was a dumping ground for lepers. Father Damien single-handedly attempted to serve miserable dying people. The sisters responded. Today Molokai has one of the world's finest leper hospitals.

Sister Jane Frances discussed briefly the story of her life.

"MY LIFE is not very dramatic," she said. "I grew up in a devout Catholic family of German background. My parents went to Mass every morning."

"They were good people and I had a happy childhood. I had always intended to be a sister. I entered the convent in 1936 when I was 16."

"I was far too young. I would certainly counsel any girl of 16 to postpone her religious vocation. Sixteen is too young to make a permanent decision. But in my case it worked."

"People ask me if I have ever had any regrets. Do I feel a twinge of envy for the girls I grew up with? Did I ever wish I had their pretty clothes, fine families, luxuries and good times? I can honestly say I did not. I had made my decision and chosen my way of life. Understand, I am speaking only about myself, not all sisters."

"It is a way of life. On vacations I visit my family. I enjoy myself but I am always glad to get home again to the convent."

"Are all nuns happy?"

"Of course not," she said. "They are just people and subject to all human stresses. But we do have sense and a common purpose."

"I was fortunate. There has never been any doubt in my mind. I didn't go through any deep trial. Many people do."

"This is a good life. It has pattern and discipline but it also has freedom. We recognize that people have different talents and we help them to develop them. There are sisters who are outstanding artists, authors, scientists and scholars."

She lives with nine sisters in a charming convent near St. Anthony's Church.

SISTER Jane Frances discussed the changes and conflicts in the Catholic Church.

"These reflect the stresses of the world," she said. "After all, we do live in the world. Ours is a time of moral breakdown."

"Priests and nuns are leaving the Church because they cannot accept permanent commitment. This parallels the breakdown in marriage. The wedding vows are also a permanent commitment."

"The dropouts are doing much harm because they are weakening education. We need sound education and especially of the type the Church can give. I'm a high school teacher but I don't think I could teach in public high school the way it is today."

"Anyone who deals with young people, as I do, hears an anguished cry for help. They are trying to find something when they turn to drugs or Oriental religions. They are seeking meaning in life."

"The aftermath of the Vatican Council has been hard on Catholics. Our Church was once authoritarian. Some would say dictatorial. Now there are so many choices. People are saying all sorts of things, sometimes just for the sake of saying something. This may be eventually good, but now it is very troubling to many."

"WOMEN in religious vocations are having a changing role. I do not accept the idea of women priests. If Our Lord had wanted that he would have had women Apostles. His mother would have been a great Apostle. Many sisters disagree with me on this."

Church

giving

rising

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —

Americans are giving more money to religious causes than ever despite the sag in the economy. But the increase has not kept pace with inflation and is forcing sharp belt-tightening in many quarters.

Over-all, contributions to religion last year hit a record $16.85 billion, a gain of $760 million or 7.5 per cent over the year before, according to figures compiled by the American Association of Fund-Raising Councils.

But the increase lagged behind the year's 11 per cent inflation, the report notes, compelling church steps to economize.

In some cases, this has meant reducing personnel and programs. One of the sharpest recent cutbacks came this spring in the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (southern), which ordered domestic denominational personnel cut by 40, from a total of 248 down to 208.

Besides that, the salaries of those staying on the job were reduced by 5 per cent to avoid further trimming of staff. Also, the number of overseas missionaries was to be pared from 400 to 365 by year's end through attrition.

Similar squeezes were on elsewhere. The controversy-ridden Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, running a deficit, planned cutbacks in program and personnel.

Some other denominations took such steps earlier, including the Episcopal Church, the United Presbyterian Church and United Church of Christ. However, the balance sheet was holding firm for some bodies, including the United Methodists and Southern Baptists, the nation's largest Protestant denominations.

Their income climb was reported running ahead of the cost increases.

New pastor

A reception will be held for the Rev. Donald Thompson, new pastor, at the Paramount United Methodist Church, 16635 Paramount Blvd., Sunday, 11 a.m. He comes to Paramount from Hawthorne. The previous pastor, the Rev. Charles E. Jones, has been assigned to Gardena.

God's word

Religion Editor:

I would like to comment on your column of June 28th, which misstates the differences between factions within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod. The cause of the conflict is "intellectual" only so far as the intellectuality of certain of the clergy makes it impossible for them to retain a child-like faith in the Bible as God's word, and in Jesus Christ as a risen Savior. Rather than give up their positions in the church, they now seek to change these beliefs, which the church has taught and professed ever since its formation.

We members believe that God created the world in six days, that Jonah actually was swallowed by a great fish, that Jesus' mother was a virgin, and that Jesus Christ actually rose from the dead. Many of the so-called "moderates" in our clergy support "theologians" who deny these truths, as being unnecessary to modern religion.

Without a risen Christ, we have no Savior. Without complete acceptance, we have no Bible. Without rock-firm administration, we have no church. It is suggested that those pastors who cannot accept the teachings of the Bible remove themselves from a ministry they do not believe. The church will then be able to return to its true and only mission — the spreading of the gospel of Jesus Christ, with faith in the Bible as the word of God.

Watchtower

Religion Editor:

In response to the letter sent by the gentleman from the Church of Christ, in the Saturday, June 28, 1975 issue:

Who could fail to appreciate the sincerity of one who is trying so hard to get through to people that consider themselves to be honest witnesses of Jehovah God? His desire for them to turn from what he considers the false doctrines of the Watchtower Society to something better, is commendable. And speaking as one of Jehovah's witnesses, I would like to thank him for his concern.

I find it interesting to note that whenever anyone attacks the Watchtower Society, it's usually on the basis of some inaccuracy in their chronology and 1975 is usually discussed.

Mothers

Religion Editor:

Enclosed is a poem I wrote many years ago, which express my sentiments about war.

WAR

For nine long months he lay close to my heart
And I gave him of my body, his breath.
Then racked with torture and intense pain
I went down into the Valley of Death.
March alone, no regiments were there,
No flags flying, no drums weird beat.
Alone, onto the black abyss that yawned
Until mission accomplished, there was no retreat.

But I was the victor and I brought back a son
Who drew life from my proud young breast,
And in Flanders field, where the poppies grow
My baby, grown a man, is at rest.
Flesh of my flesh, my blood in his veins
At the Argonne he was shot and killed.
My gift to the world, from my war with death
Lies where crosses stand, mute and stilled.

Oh! mothers of wars it is our duty today
To raise voices of outraged pain,
Our hands that rocked cradles thru the years
MUST keep war from robbing us again.

While Bible chronology is important when one wants to know where one stands in the stream of time, there are no witnesses of my acquaintance who plan to quit serving Jehovah in the event that no momentous world situation takes place by the end of 1975. You see, our love of God and desire to see His will take place is not limited by any certain date.

It is incredible to think, however, that anyone would have us turn from the Watchtower Society to the churches of Christendom.

Does a starving man turn down an invitation to a banquet to go begging crumbs in the street?

Does a sane person run back into a burning building when he has no cause?

Yes, the Watchtower Society is an organization composed of human beings and therefore subject to error, but unlike the religionists of Christendom, when that Society discerns it has made an error, it is corrected publicly and with an explanation. How about Christendom? Which church of that lofty organization most recently ceased celebrating December 25th as the birth of Christ?

Yet people throughout the earth are aware that He was not born on that date. Who is it now that is peddling false doctrines?

No, if honest-hearted Jehovah's witnesses were to return to the churches they would be subject to all the immorality and spiritual starvation from which they fled in the first place. If I as an individual must choose between the

Watchtower Society, with its history of supporting peace and love and pure Christian worship with a few errors in chronology; or the churches of Christendom, with her history of bloody warfare, gross immorality, unclean worship and anti-Christ teachings, in all honesty I must choose the company of Jehovah's witnesses — they live and teach and preach the above mentioned Christian activities and that's the kind of life I want for myself and my family. — John 6:67, 68

Thank you for the opportunity to respond. Jehovah's witnesses always take pleasure in discussing the Watchtower Society as well as Bible truths.

Long feud ending Knights, Masons to join in worship

By MARK CLUTTER
On July 20 the Knights of Columbus and their pals, the Masons, in lodge uniforms will attend 9 a.m. worship at Covenant Presbyterian Church.

This may be the first time in history that the Knights and Masons will go to a Protestant church together.

It is not the first time, however, for their attending church together. Last Nov. 3 they went to Mass at Our Lady of Refuge. They intend to do it again next All Souls Day.

Milton Ammann, a Mason, and Richard Fritz, a Knight, talked about the new friendship of the once hostile orders.

"This is something that should have happened many years ago," they both said.

To understand why it did not happen one would need to delve deep into the tangled histories of the secret organizations. Until very recent times the two lodges—detested each other. Sometimes their members would express their hatred by fistfuffs.

Masonry in various forms has been in existence for many centuries, but the Lodge as it now exists was organized in Britain in 1717. It spread throughout the world.

"In some European countries it became political," Ammann said. "It was banned by Pope Leo because of some of its activities. The investigation was incomplete. It was not understood that the Masons were different in America."

The Knights of Columbus, an organization of Catholic men, was founded in 1882. It too has spread to many parts of the world.

TO UNDERSTAND the sometimes intense animosity between the Masons and the Knights one must have some knowledge of past religious prejudice in America.

Most Americans had a history of religious conflict in Britain and Europe. The Protestants had an inbred fear of the Catholics. The Catholics tended to huddle in tight little groups because they were outnumbered. America was mostly a nation of small towns which induced narrow local patriotisms.

Outsiders always feel there is sometime dangerous about secret orders.

Both lodges are intensely religious. Masonry has never been Protestant, but most of the members were and are Protestants. All Knights are Catholics. They call themselves "the right arm of the Church."

Masonic publications of 40 years ago were often tinged with anti-Catholicism although Masonry has never been officially anti-Catholic.

WHY ARE once hostile groups now so friendly?

It has been a slow process and it is not complete yet, the men agreed. It is in keeping with the increasing spirit of brotherhood in modern times.

Both lodges still have vestiges of the old animosities. Many old men find it difficult to give up life-long feelings and opinions.

Concerned Christians

Concerned Christians of Compton, a group organized to promote church growth and social action, reports that it now has the support of most of the nearly 150 churches of Compton.

Concerned Christians was the dream of Mrs. Zelda Turner and Mrs. Dolores Mason. They sought the aid of Dr. Sid Smith, Southern Baptist Home Missionary in Compton. The organization was formed last September. Its president is the Rev. Willie Foreman, pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Compton.

"Our hope is in youth," Ammann said. "We believe that the younger men will forget such prejudices."

Patriotism has played a strong role in the new sense of brotherhood. Both the Knights and the Masons are intensely patriotic. They have appeared together in parades and other events on national holidays.

Often friendliness is enhanced by just good neighborliness. A Knights lodge in this area heard of a newly founded Masonic lodge that had no place to meet. So the Knights invited the Masons to share their hall until the Masons could find their own quarters.

"It was rather funny," Fritz said. "For several months there was a Masonic emblem on the Knights of Columbus hall."

"Some Catholics are now joining the Masons," Ammann said.

They said that Roland Bach, grand chaplain of the Masons of California and Hawaii, has been very influential in the new friendship. Bach, a retired colonel, is active in civic affairs in Long Beach.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the Lutheran Church's deeply divided Missouri Synod is optimistic the biennial convention in Anaheim, Calif., will "go a long way" toward resolving the denomination's doctrinal dispute.

But a leader of the "moderate" opposition to the president said he believes the convention "will tear us apart" and is "pessimistic about the future of the synod as an institution."

The differing assessments were provided in telephone interviews with Dr. J.A.O. Preus, president of the 2.8-million member church, and the Rev. Sam Roth, president of Evangelical Lutherans in Mission, as Missouri Synod Lutherans began gathering in Anaheim for the convention.

"The Missouri Synod is a great church," Preus said. "I'm convinced it can do anything it wants to do under God."

While saying, "I do not agree with the flamboyant rhetoric about the church being paralyzed," Preus conceded the doctrinal dispute "has not been salutary" for the life of the church.

Roth, however, said a division of the church was "inevitable."

"I believe I'm being forced out," he said. If the Anaheim convention passes proposed resolutions reaffirming decisions made two years ago in New Orleans, "it will very effectively close the door that some people felt was left open a crack" for reconciliation, he said.

THE DISPUTE has been brewing for a number of years, but it was the synod's New Orleans convention that precipitated climactic events leading to a state of open warfare among factions in the church.

At that time, delegates re-elected Preus, considered the head of the conservative faction, to a second term as president; adopted a statement on scriptural and confessional principles, and declared the majority of the faculty at the synod's prestigious Concordia Seminary at St. Louis, Mo., in violation of the church constitution, charging them with holding and advocating "false doctrine."

Much of the disagreement centers on biblical interpretation.

Synod conservatives, for example, insist it has to be accepted literally that Jonah was swallowed by a big fish and that there was only one author of the book of Isaiah.

The division led to suspension of Concordia President John Tietjen and a walkout by a majority of the staff, faculty and students, who set up "Concordia Seminary in Exile" (Seminex) in February, 1974.

Since then the dispute has widened to include the denomination's mission staff, some district presidents who ordained Seminex students and the establishment of ELIM as a protest group.

Nearly every area of discussion during the convention will touch on the dispute, but moderates don't expect to win any key votes.

"STORY of the convention was written months ago," Roth said, referring to selection of delegates. He said whether or not the synod reaffirms positions taken at the New Orleans convention would be a key issue.

Another resolution would brand ELIM "with great anguish and regret" as a "schismatic" organization and lay the ground work for "appropriate action."

"These resolutions may look rather formidable," Preus replied, "but to the majority of the Synod they look fair and reasonable. People can get out of the difficult position they are in."

He said passage of the resolution on ELIM — which Roth believes is assured — would not mean an end to the organization but "a decline in their strength and influence."

Preus said the convention "is going to go a long way toward resolving" the dispute. "It is the last real hurdle before the synod can draw down the hurdle on this thing."

Roth reluctantly agreed, but for a radically different reason — he believes there is nothing the moderates can do. He predicted most issues would be settled by a 60-40 convention vote, with ELIM on the short end.

"Jack Preus has led a purge movement (in the synod) for five years," he said. "He's going to be reaping the harvest of what he has sown."

"Dissent," Roth said of the moderate movement, "is contrary to our nature."

And even though he believes the outcome of the convention "is set in concrete," Roth said it is "a legitimate political process."

"It is not a sham," he said, "but a shame."

Hogs for hungry

Ridder News Service

Matfield Green, Kan.—Most every Saturday a dozen or so volunteers from Mormon churches in Kansas converge on a pig farm at the western edge of the Flint Hills to help their fellow man.

Among them are professional people used to working in air-conditioned offices and students unversed in things rural—volunteers so inexperienced that they just may find dirty work on a farm intriguing.

"THERE CAN be a lot of fun in work, especially when your heart's right," said Vahl Bodily of Manhattan, Kan., a church official who oversees the farm.

At least once a year, able-bodied men from area Mormon churches work a day at the farm. This past Saturday 14 volunteers, four from Manhattan and the rest from Wichita, arrived and began hauling hog houses, cleaning a muddy sty and cultivating a field of milo.

To provide assistance to their needy members, members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints conduct many such money-making ventures in areas where congregations are located. One such concern manufactures peanut butter, another jam and another leather products.

Earnings are sent to Salt Lake City and added to the church's welfare fund.

Fear of taps prompts use of double-talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department is not concerned about Russian spies in this country learning classified U.S. secrets by tapping telephones, an official said Friday.

Some officers, however, are not confident enough to converse in natural prose.

The department's security office instructs new officials from the attorney general down about regulations requiring the use of "secure telephones" to discuss classified matters.

But secure telephones are not always available for the big volume of calls about matters that may be sensitive but not classified. This has led the officials to develop a style of double talk they hope cannot be understood by outsiders.

The secure telephones used by the Justice, State and Defense Departments, the Central Intelligence Agency and the White House have electronic scramblers with a code changed daily.

"We've got to assume they can be intercepted," a security staff member said. "But what can they (Russian spies) do with garbled junk? Our technology is such that we're confident we can use a secure phone without a reasonable threat of compromise."

The chief reason Soviet interception has to be assumed is that a great volume of domestic telephone communications are now being bounced off satellites. That makes them available to anyone with the needed electronic equipment.

The Rockefeller Commission report on the CIA estimated that at least 40 per cent of the approximately 2,000 Russian officials in the United States at any given time are spies, and security officials know that this represents potentially an enormous capability for intercepting government telephone calls.

Kevin T. Maroney, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's criminal division said he seldom uses a secure telephone but he has developed habitual double talk for all calls involving sensitive matters.

The habit is an old one, dating from long before the upsurge in Communist spying, he said. Presumably most government officials who deal regularly in security matters develop similar "codes" of their own.

"If I call somebody and want to make reference to something I know he is already familiar with, I can do that in a way that he will know what I'm talking about but somebody not familiar with the subject would not," Maroney explained.

"That is not a game," he said. "It is recognition of the fact that when we do talk on the phone, there is a possibility of the conversation being intercepted."

BICENTENNIAL KICKED OFF

sold 100,000 traditional-size American flags last year, predicted that sales mark would be eclipsed this year.

"And there has been a tremendous market for flags with the Bicentennial symbol as well as the Betsy Ross flag and the Bennington flag," he added.

He said the Bennington flag was the first battle flag of the Continental Army, preceding the Betsy Ross flag which became the first official U.S. flag.

Erdmans said he was hard-pressed to keep enough flags in stock because his two East Coast suppliers are swamped with other orders. "I order flags by the gross and I get them in by the dozens."

In the nation's capital, the Peoples Bicentennial Commission, which has criticized many of the official Bicentennial functions as being too commercial, dubbed the commercializers "Tories of the Year." The group conducted a wreath-laying ceremony at the Jefferson Memorial on the banks of the Potomac River.

In South Dakota, American Indian Movement spokesman Ted Means said the march to Mt. Rushmore signaled the beginning of AIM's Bicentennial year.

Ted, a brother of AIM leader Russell Means, said the marchers were also honoring the Indian who died last week during a gun battle on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Two FBI agents were slain when they tried to serve arrest warrants stemming from an assault case.

Exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn toured the restored colonial city of Williamsburg, Va., and urged other visitors to preserve their nation's history and traditions.

"You cannot ever assume that something that is new is better than the old tradition," said Solzhenitsyn, who was accompanied by his wife Natalia and three friends. "The preserving of national traditions is a very important item for national identity."

A special troop of Eagle Scouts representing 20 Boy Scout councils in New Jersey completed a five-day hike which traced the Cannonball Trail, a Revolutionary War supply route from West Point, N.Y., to Oakland, N.J.

In San Francisco, local Filipinos celebrating their own Independence Day joined in the annual Fourth of July parade.

The Filipinos, whose island nation became independent from the United States on July 4, 1946, decorated 20 floats for the parade.

In Memphis, the smell of marijuana was in the air, and tactical police were on patrol as Mick Jagger and the Rolling Stones headlined an all-day rock concert at the 50,000-seat Memphis Memorial Stadium.

Powder Puff race airborne

RIVERSIDE (UPI) — All 98 planes in the 28th annual Powder Puff Derby left Friday for Phoenix on the first leg of the 2,600-mile women-only cross-country air

The race started officially at 9:17 a.m. Friday when Helen McGee of Sonora took off into a clear, sunny sky in a single-engine Piper Comanche, followed closely by 97 other twin and single-engine planes, leaving at 30-second intervals.

Only one plane had any problems. Gini Richardson's single-engine Aero-Commander 112 developed gear troubles and she had to return briefly, but took off again a few minutes later.

The finish line is in Boyne Falls, a Michigan ski and summer resort.

A federal judge in Los Angeles this week turned down a male pilot who sought a court order to force Derby officials to let him enter the traditionally all-female race. He based his case on the same sex discrimination laws usually cited by women seeking to break into traditionally all-male fields.

The judge decided there was not enough government involvement in the race for federal antidiscrimination laws to apply.

The $5,000 top prize goes to the crew with the highest score based on a point system that handicaps the faster planes to give every entrant an equal chance to win.

About 40 of the women are entered in the race for the first time, but some are real veterans.

Richardson of Yakima, Wash., has logged 24,000 flying hours, more than any other entrant. Friday she took off on her 22nd Powder Puff Derby.

Pauline Glasson of Corpus Christi, Tex., is also entered for the 22nd time. She has 23,900 hours of flying time.

Derby spokeswoman Wanda Cummings said the fastest planes should finish in about two days with the slower ones straggling in sometime Monday.

"All the planes must be stock models," she said, "with horsepower ratings between 145 and 450." She estimated top speeds would range from 130 to 300 miles per hour.

The women will cross the country in eight jumps of about 300 miles each. The smaller planes will stop and gas up after each leap, but the larger planes may fly past after checking in by radio.

13 hurt in Texas minitrain crash

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — The miniature train roared across a bridge over the Trinity River Friday and then derailed, tossing amusement park visitors down the riverbank. Thirteen persons were injured, one of them seriously.

One of the injured passengers said he saw the train engineer slump over seconds before the crash. But he said he did not know whether the engineer was trying to halt the train or was disabled.

"The train was doing about 45 miles an hour at the time of the crash and that's way too fast for this train," the injured man said.

Witnesses said the train had crossed the bridge over the Trinity River when the locomotive and three cars of the four-car train left the tracks.

Most of the injuries were minor, but the engineer was admitted to John Peter Smith Hospital in serious condition, authorities said. His name was not released.

Police said the engineer was unconscious after the crash.

The train is operated by a concession firm hired by the city and runs through Forest Park and into the city zoo near downtown.

Police Capt. Lawrence Wood said if the derailment had occurred two seconds earlier the passengers would have been thrown into the river.

3 'invade' home; women shot down

CHICAGO (UPI) — Three men broke into a South Side home early Friday, tied up three women and methodically shot them one by one, police said.

Old trick by antique burglar

NEW YORK (AP) — An ingenious thief used Trojan horse techniques Friday to gain entrance to a fashionable shop where he stole an estimated $175,000 worth of antiques.

The intruder climbed into a wooden pyramid-shaped box, about 5 feet high, used as a temporary base for a street light outside LeBeau's Antique Shop on Madison Avenue.

Police said he stole some $175,000 worth of antiques, but there was no immediate description of the stolen articles.

Two of the women died along with one of the assailants, who was apparently shot and run over by his companions.

Police said the three "invaded" the apartment, tied up the women and sexually assaulted one of them. They also ransacked the apartment in search of money.

The two dead women were identified as Bessie Little, 43, and Evelyn Jean McCoy, 24. Mrs. Little's daughter, Marilyn Little, 22, was shot in the shoulder and was listed in fair condition.

Police searching the area later came upon the body of Derrick Robinson, 15, several blocks from the apartment where the shooting took place. He had been shot several times in the head and run over by an auto.

Police speculated that the other two men may have been afraid that Robinson, identified by police as one of the intruders, would tell police of the slayings, so they killed him.

Police also said he may have been used by the other two men to get into the home since he knew the residents.

Fourth abroad—protest vs. praise

Associated Press

Paint-throwing, flag-burning demonstrators staged an anti-American rally in Australia Friday as Americans mourned fallen World War II comrades in Italy, sang "Auld Lang Syne" with friends in Denmark and were snubbed at a July 4 reception in Portugal.

In Melbourne, about 200 demonstrators scuffled with police and threw paint bombs at the Pan Am office in an "Independence for Australia" protest timed to coincide with America's 199th birthday. Police said nine demonstrators were arrested and one officer injured.

IN SYDNEY, protesters chanting "Yankee go home!" "Independence for Australia!" and "Keep Soviets Out!" burned American and Soviet flags. About 20 protesters shouting "no U.S. bases!" burned Uncle Sam in effigy outside the hotel where Prime Minister Gough Whitlam was attending the annual ball of the Australian American Association.

Apparently unaware of the demonstration outside, Whitlam announced that Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller will visit Australia next March for a festival commemorating the American Revolution.

IN ITALY, American veterans of the 5th Army returned to Nettuno and Anzio 30 years after the end of the war. Italians who remember the original landing were glad to see them.

In Denmark, about 5,000 Americans and Danes gathered in the heather-clad hills of Rebild outside the provincial capital of Aalborg — the biggest July 4th event outside North America for 63 years.

In Lisbon, senior Portuguese officials boycotted en masse the U.S. Embassy's Independence Day reception.

In Bangkok, Thai students wound up peaceful rallies against U.S. foreign policy following a day marked by rhetoric and rains which dampened thousands who gathered to hear speakers criticize America.

However, the U.S. ambassador to Thailand, Charles Whitehouse, said at an embassy reception that the United States will continue to value its friendship with Thailand.

Youth loses three fingers in explosion

A 15-year-old Downey youth Friday lost three of his fingers in an explosion which Sheriff's deputies said was the result of a crystallized dynamite packet he carried.

The unidentified youth was in serious condition at Downey Community Hospital after surgery following the incident which occurred in the 7200 block on Via Rio Nido at 5 p.m.

Officers said the youth had a foil wrapped package containing dynamite crystals he obtained in a brown prescription bottle from a young friend in the Lakewood area earlier in the day. The packet unaccountably exploded.

Church aids pastor, 16 kin Viet family seeks home

By TIM BURT
Staff Writer

There's a Vietnamese family of 17 looking for a home in Long Beach.

The head of the household is Phat Cao, a refugee who with the help of a local church, has settled in Long Beach with his relatives.

Cao, 47, a pastor for the Assemblies of God Church in Vung Tau, a city 75 miles southeast of Saigon, said he believes his religious experiences were greatly responsible for his escape from Vietnam and safe arrival in the United States.

WHAT HE calls a miracle began when Cao and his family arrived at Camp Pendleton and continued when the Christian Life Church, 3400 Pacific Ave., decided to sponsor the family and provide it with a year's housing, clothing, food, transportation and other needs.

"Through a friend of mine, we decided to go up to see the refugees at Camp Pendleton," said Rev. Wesley Steelberg. "We fell in love with the family and decided to recommend to the church's board that we sponsor these people."

The family didn't want to split up, Steelberg said, so the church members agreed to sponsor all 16 of Cao's relatives, ranging in age from 45 to one month. The family is being housed in the church for a few days until permanent housing can be arranged.

Steelberg and his staff will locate housing for the Vietnamese, help them learn English and train those who are capable of employment.

CAO, who had several close calls with death in Vietnam, will fulfill God's wish in this country, he said. "We came here to worship God, which the Communists would no longer allow us to do aloud after the takeover," said Cao.

The Communists twice came to execute Cao, who worked for the United States. "Both times when they came, he was away so he felt that he should attempt to escape the country and come to the United States," Steelberg said.

Cao was able to collect enough gold, the only currency accepted for boat travel, to buy space for his family on a boat which had a 300-passenger capacity, but which carried 486.

The boat was stopped three times at Communist-held bridges as it traveled down the Saigon River. Cao said the passengers made a Communist flag to pass through the stations. The passengers were aboard the boat for four days without food, water or sanitary facilities as the craft traveled to Singapore.

"WHEN WE got to Singapore, the people there would not let us dock, so we had to spend three more days at sea. A number of people got sick and disease was widespread," said Cao.

American missionaries in Singapore finally contacted the Vietnamese aboard the boat and arranged for all of them to be sent to the United States. Cao and his family arrived at Camp Pendleton June 6 and left for Long Beach July 1, just in time to experience two American traditions—baseball and the Fourth of July.

"Cao had been in this country before," said Steelberg, "but for the other people in his family, this is all new. We went to the market the other day and they were amazed, wondering if this was the only store in Long Beach."

"We mentioned about going to see a baseball game at Dodger Stadium and one of the children asked 'What's a baseball game?'"

"WE'RE happy to be here and would like to be citizens so we can enjoy all of the freedoms people in this country enjoy. I would like to be a citizen so I could go back to my church in Vietnam and preach God's word. I can't do that while I'm a Vietnamese citizen," said Cao.

Huge parade helps mark U.S. birthday

Sixteen military groups paraded, along with 190 other entries, before an estimated 100,000 spectators Friday in the 71st annual Fourth of July parade in Huntington Beach.

Marchers and spectators alike broiled under a hazy sun as the procession traveled a three-mile course. Many of the spectators were wearing bathing suits and other airy togs, and many sipped cool drinks as bands and floats moved by.

Lt. General Kenneth W. Schultz, USAF, reviewed the parade from a grandstand near the Huntington Beach City Hall.

IN 71 YEARS of organizing July 4th parades, the City of Huntington Beach has learned that parade-watchers like horses, and like flags and drum-and-bugle corps and pretty majorettes, and like bands of all kinds, and military marchers who know how to march, and like flags flying and novelties such as clowns, elephants, antique automobiles and flowery floats.

So Friday's parade had 'em all, and the city's parade-watchers watched from the curbs and sidewalks, from folding chairs in parkways, from tree-tops and from trailer-tops, and from roofs here and there, for all the three hours it took the paraders to get the city's 71st July 4 parade done.

The biggest cooling drinks taken by any of the paraders, afterwards, were inhaled by Packy and Derm, two junior-size elephants—ten gallons each of fresh tap water.

Malpractice crisis forum

The sharply different perspectives from which physicians and lawyers see the medical malpractice insurance crisis will be explained to Town Hall at a forum July 10 at Anaheim's Disneyland Hotel.

Charles A. O'Brien, legal counsel for the California Physicians' Crisis Committee, and Elmer C. Low, president of the California Trial Lawyers' Association, will discuss "The Malpractice Explosion" at the meeting, a noon luncheon.

O'Brien, former chief deputy state attorney general, will relate the views of the medical profession and offer what it says is a long-range "solution" to the problem of escalating costs for such insurance coverage.

Low, who practices law both in Los Angeles and Orange counties, will discuss the trial lawyers' viewpoint in the hotly contested issue.

Nationally, malpractice fees have zoomed about 600 per cent in recent years and now reach almost one billion dollars per year for coverage. Officials in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare predicted recently that they might rise to $12 billion annually.

To focus attention on their problem, anesthesiologists recently staged "slowdowns" in many of the state's hospitals, delaying elective surgeries but handling all emergencies.

They have threatened further protests if the Legislature fails to enact insurance reforms they call vital if they are to continue to practice.

L.B. oilmen renew drive on tax break for elderly

By RALPH HINMAN
Staff Writer

A campaign to persuade the Long Beach City Council not to double the present 5 cents per barrel oil production license tax to benefit senior citizens has been renewed by local independent oilmen.

Letters signed by C.C. Albright, Long Beach Chamber of Commerce vice president and independent oilman, have been sent to all known oil royalty owners here. The letters asked them to contact their councilmen before a July 15 budget hearing when the proposed tax is expected to be discussed.

Since then, Albright wrote, Mansell in meetings with chamber representatives offered a compromise 50 per cent increase — or 2½ cents more per barrel.

"This still is not acceptable," he continued. "We still feel that an additional tax on one industry and its royalty owners is inequitable and discriminatory."

Albright also disputed the official estimate of potential tax losses to the city. "Our calculations indicate it (tax relief) would cost more like $380,000 instead of the $805,000 estimated by the city," he said.

"In any case," Albright concluded, "it would be unfair to assess one industry even as much as another penny. Our industry should be taxed exactly like any other industry in Long Beach."

"We should not be singled out

Three on Mansell staff to serve City Council

Seven federally funded jobs, included in the Long Beach city budget approved this week by the City Council, are listed as part of the city manager's office but three of them are working aides to council members.

The seven jobs, one more than last year's quota, will be financed by $87,262 from federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds.

The issue of whether council members should have staff assistants has arisen in the past, and the city attorney's office recently wrote an opinion that the charter does not permit the council to appoint an employee or fix his salary.

At this week's budget hearing, Councilwoman Eunice N. Sato noted that the city manager's budget included seven positions financed by the federal CETA.

"Is that for council members or is that for your office?" she asked Mansell.

Mansell did not specifically answer the question, replying that "two or three would be in my office," and that "this seemed to be the best place to put them."

Sick-out in attorney pay case spreads

A "sick-out" of attorneys in the Orange County district attorney and public defender offices spread by week's end to 98 lawyers — who promptly got notices that medical excuses would be needed in the future.

The attorneys were among those negotiating with the county for salary increases; they had rejected initial pay hike offers they said were too nominal.

Thursday 63 attorneys were absent from the district attorney's staff of 89 deputies, and 34 were absent from the public defender's staff of 60.

FIVE other deputy district attorneys, in court for pending cases, complained of illness and left after their court hearings were over.

No major trials were scheduled Thursday and all cases were "covered" in the Superior Courts, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. James L. Enright.

However, traffic courts reportedly found attorney shortages disconcerting, and many judges dropped cases they considered minor, and continued others.

The absent attorneys cannot be penalized, even if some feigned illness, because the offices affected don't require doctors' confirmation of illness, Enright explained.

Designer Ernest Ransom, 32, 6847 Long Beach Blvd., was one of 50 who submitted new looks for the American flag in a contest at Del Amo shopping center in Torrance this weekend. Betsy Ross might have turned a gray hair but spectators were intrigued with the many new looks, as evidenced by overflow attendance at the Fashion Square pre-Centennial event.

'Complex, fateful' housing future seen

By BRAD ALTMAN, Staff Writer

While lauding the Senate passage of the new 1975 Housing Bill as an extraordinarily strong and prompt response by Congress to a serious need, an official of the nation's homebuilding industry said at the just-completed 17th annual Pacific Coast Builders Conference that "these are fateful days for housing."

Dr. Nat Rogg, executive vice president of the 75,000-member National Association of Home Builders (NAHB), spoke at the closing session of the three-day conference in San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel.

THE BILL Rogg praised was signed Wednesday by President Ford in a White House Rose Garden ceremony. But early in the conference speakers criticized the Chief Executive for vetoing a more ambitious housing bill offered by the heavily Democratic Congress.

J.S. Norman, NAHB president, declared at the opening session that Ford's veto—and the subsequent failure of an override effort in Congress—meant that 500,000 additional jobs, 325,000 housing units and $2 billion to $3 billion in revenues would not be realized in 1975.

However, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., told reporters in Washington, D.C. Wednesday that he estimated the new compromise housing bill will create up to 300,000 new homes and up to 600,000 jobs if the Administration releases the full $10 billion authorized.

U.S. Rep. Jerry M. Patterson, D-Santa Ana, declared that Ford's veto of the first housing bill was a "major blunder."

THE FRESHMAN from Orange County told the Western builders that the veto illustrated Ford's lack of concern for housing and its potential impact on economic recovery.

"President Ford has accused the 94th Congress of being a 'Do Nothing Congress,'" Patterson said, "but I maintain that the problem is that Ford is a 'Sign Nothing President.'"

Rogg said that the housing industry "went farther down earlier in 1974 than the general economy and our troubles have lasted longer."

The NAHB spokesman said that a "massive restructuring of the country's economic institutions is required if the nation is to avoid continuing inflation and financial stress."

Rogg, an economist, said that he observes a growing instability in the American society that bodes ill for the future.

He disagreed with his colleagues who he said claim the country's fundamental economic resources are adequate to get us out of inflation and economic doldrums.

"IT IS EASY to agree with that diagnosis, but only on one condition — namely that we re-examine and modernize our economic institutions, primarily the federal reserve; the labor market; the tax structures; government regulatory agency requirements, including so-called environmental protection measures, and our economic relations with nations abroad, particularly commodity and oil producing nations."

Former Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel elaborated on the theme of inflation in the housing industry and other industries by saying it will never be solved unless supply exceeds the demand.

Hickel, a principal of Hickel Investment Co., Anchorage, Alaska, said when production in housing falters it merely fans the flames of inflation for prospective homebuyers.

Concerning development's impact on the environment, Hickel said, "You can't separate man from nature. Accordingly, public policies should be developed that call for the highest and best use of land in the public interest."

The former secretary of the interior said most experts apparently have concluded that the way to stop inflation is to cut back production with housing a prime example.

"IF THERE EVER was anything further from the truth it's that you can't stop inflation by cutting production. The exact opposite is true; inflation is caused when you have a scarcity. The only way to stop inflation is by increasing production."

"Don't tell me that the cost of electricity won't go down when there's too much electricity. Don't tell me that the cost of a house won't go down when there are more houses on the market than there are buyers," Hickel said.

To encourage home sales and increase production, Oakley Hunter, president of the Federal National Mortgage Association, called for the updating of local building and zoning codes to enable builders to build smaller, less expensive housing units.

Hunter said the annual income needed to make mortgage payments on a median-priced new single family home increased from $2,250 in 1950 to $16,000 in 1974.

"Median family incomes rose from $3,300 to $13,000 during the same period," he said. "And today only about a third of the American families have incomes to buy a median-priced house as compared to two thirds in 1950."

HUNTER SAID the acceptability of smaller housing to the home building public is demonstrated by the growing utilization of mobile homes as permanent residences.

He urged greater uses of techniques such as those employed by mobile home manufacturers and others to construct permanent housing which would be considered as real estate rather than being licensed as motor vehicles.

Hunter said this would lead to new business opportunities for home builders and, from the consumer standpoint, would result in lower financing costs and less depreciation in value than with mobile homes.

Dr. Joyce Brothers, a noted consultant, columnist and psychologist, emphasized the importance of the single-family home and said it has emerged as the "security blanket of the seventies" with its dramatic economic appreciation and its increasing emotional appeal.

She said the most desired goal in America has become a "happy home" according to recent surveys.

"AMERICANS ARE placing increasing importance on their homes today — be they mansions or lofts — as financial and lifestyle investments."

Pointing out that this trend is likely to continue strong in the years ahead, Dr. Brothers said that by 1980 the 25- to 34-year-old age group will receive 26 per cent of pre-tax income and there will be 49 per cent more workers in that age group than there were in 1970.

She added that during the past five years investment in a sound home in a stable neighborhood produced a better return than any alternative investment a family could have made during that period, noting that in just four years the value of homes have appreciated by 50 per cent or more.

Dr. Brothers told the builders that in order to provide homes that will appeal to the 25- to 34-year-old age group they must understand the attitudes of these customers.

"THESE ARE members of the so-called 'Jeans Generation' which first reflected its attitude in its clothing. Now these young people want their homes to reflect their attitudes and personalities."

"All this means the homebuilding industry will be catering to a much broader range of individuals and that its product will, likewise, need to be more varied," Dr. Brothers concluded.

New plant addition for Garrett Corp.

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

The Garrett Corp. has broken ground for a $4 million addition to its AiResearch Manufacturing Co. facility at 2525 W. 190th St., Torrance.

The three-level, 155,000 square foot office building is scheduled for completion in July, 1976. The addition will give AiResearch more than a million square feet of office, manufacturing and laboratory space under roof in Torrance.

JOHN A. TESKE, vice president and AiResearch manager, said the new building will be occupied by engineering personnel and related staff functions presently utilizing other structures at the 190th Street site. Vacated areas in these buildings will then be used by manufacturing departments for existing and planned programs.

AiResearch's Torrance work force now is developing and manufacturing various electromechanical systems, including the emergency power unit for the new Air Force F-16 fighter aircraft being built by General Dynamics, and designing and building electric propulsion systems for light rail and advanced concept subway-type vehicles.

The contract award for the F-16 power unit program is valued initially at $1 million. The function of the device is to provide sufficient hydraulic and electric power to maintain control of the aircraft in the event the engine shuts down in flight or mechanical control links are disrupted.

Teske said the new office building is part of AiResearch's long-range development program which started in Torrance in the early 1960s.

The firm is one of the largest manufacturing firms in the South Bay area, employing more than 4,000, including 3,000 in Torrance.

NO IMMEDIATE increase in employment is anticipated, Teske said.

The new building will feature an open landscape floor layout enhanced by exterior plantings visible to occupants through large windows. Extensive use of acoustic materials will reduce interior noise.

The building is designed for possible future expansion by adding two additional floors.

Signal Landmark Properties, Inc., one of the Signal Companies of which Garrett is a member, designed and is the constructor.

Industry Week

Japanese moving inland

CLEVELAND — Japan's economic invasion of the United States is ready to move inland from the West Coast, Industry Week reported Friday.

And, it's a good bet that industry will be a prime target, the magazine for managers predicted.

These conclusions emerged from the 12th Japan-U.S. Businessmen's Conference which was attended by about 50 top business leaders from both countries to discuss mutual problems and to improve understanding.

THE MEETING has traditionally been held in Washington or New York. This year it was held in Kansas City, Mo., at the request of the Japanese. They wanted to meet in the American farm belt, which is of enormous importance to the Japanese economy.

Moreover, the area's importance as the manufacturing and distribution center of the Midwest is growing and Japan's business world has been aware of this trend.

Japan is already a good customer of the Midwest, Industry Week said. About two-thirds of the agribusiness exports from the Midwest go to Japan, as do about half of the manufactured goods exported from that region.

Plans are currently being made by the Japanese to send an investment mission into the Midwest in October. Japan has sponsored numerous U.S. tours for its businessmen to stimulate trade or to study various aspects of business.

Dollar celebrates

BUSINESS WIRE

CHICAGO—Currency traders got a Fourth of July bang out of the U.S. buck this holiday-shortened week, said the International Monetary Exchange (IMM) of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME).

The dollar thereby sustained a rally that started two weeks ago in the world's leading money centers.

The greenback strengthened in terms of all European currencies and faltered only slightly against the Canadian dollar and Japanese yen.

Driving the dollar to its best level in months was an anticipated boost in U.S. interest rates, a May increase in factory orders plus declines in industrial inventories, the Wholesale Price Index and unemployment figures.

Hardest hit of the foreign currencies was the British pound, which has been diving in suicidal fashion since early this year and is setting new lows weekly.

The latest leg of its plunge this week carried it to $2.196, or down 250 points in New York spot trading.

The usually strong Swiss franc and West German D-mark fell evenly this week. The Swiss currency dribbled 56 points lower, closing at $3.939 while the D-mark dropped 59 points for $4.185 stop.

Bank of Tokyo—Artesia-Cerritos branch

The Bank of Tokyo of California, has opened its Artesia-Cerritos branch following unusual dedication ceremonies in front of the colonial-style branch office at 16616 S. Gridley Road.

AS A GESTURE of community goodwill, Manager Fumio Endo asked local youngsters to take turns trying to break the bank's special Bicentennial pinata; made in the shape of the Liberty Bell. When the colorful ornament burst, it yielded candies and coins for the children, along with a cash donation for the Artesia-Cerritos Junior Women's Club.

Endo praised the work of the club in sponsoring safety, health and employment programs for youth in both communities and pledged his California bank's support of worthwhile projects in the future.

The ceremonies launched a month of celebration which includes a display of old American currency dating from 1793, an exhibit of photographs of the "early days" in Artesia and Cerritos, drawing prizes in which savings certificates of $200, $100 and $50 will be given away, and free gifts for new accounts.

BANK PRESIDENT Masao Tsuyama, the mayors of Artesia and Cerritos, and other civic and business leaders helped cut the ribbon for the new office, which provides complete consumer, business and international banking service.

Endo said the bank will maintain a spacious hospitality room on the premises for use by community groups.

Turbulence for airlines

By RICHARD HUGHES
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK — The once high-flying U.S. airline industry is floundering — fighting off financial disaster and a strong movement to free it from the protective arm of the federal government.

Public officials from President Ford to Sen. Edward Kennedy want to free the nation's airlines from government shackles. The airlines seem to prefer regulation.

"They generally want to be protected from outsiders and protected from each other by a benevolent regulator," said Thomas E. Kauper, an antitrust attorney in the Justice Department.

Trans World Airlines stresses its Washington ties in advertisements of a "super sale" of fares "as low as the government has allowed."

What TWA fails to mention is at the time the ads were appearing in newspapers it was asking the government for a 5 per cent increase in fares — not lower fares. In addition, TWA wants an outright subsidy of $184.1 million to help pay for jet fuel.

A TWA publicist said the advertising language was justified because TWA had filed more than 350 discount fares with the CAB to match the competition, and because it had been denied special discounts for students and senior citizens.

INTERSTATE AIRLINES have been under government regulation since 1938 when congress created the Civil Aeronautics Board to bring order to the rapidly expanding airline industry.

Dr. George W. James, economist for the Air Transport Association of America, recently testified in favor of continued regulation at a hearing held by Kennedy's Senate subcommittee on administrative practices and procedures.

"Simply put," said James, "the experience of 37 years of regulated competition has resulted in an air transportation network bringing adequate, integrated and reliable public transport service to 540 U.S. airports serving thousands of communities, at reasonable and cost-related prices."

"It is," said James, "the best transportation system in the world."

Critics, including economic advisers to President Ford, say CAB regulation protects established carriers and keeps prices artificially high.

Even the CAB, which critics consider a trade association for the airlines (that rarely considers consumer welfare, is taking a harder line. The CAB recently rejected a 5 to 6 per cent fare hike, launched an inquiry into its own "tangle of procedural spaghetti" and is reviewing its standard of 55 per cent load capacity as the benchmark for fare boosts.

THE CHIEF COMPLAINT against the CAB is that it protects interstate airlines from competitors who might cut prices.

"The board's statutory authority to control prices and its procedures for implementing that control thus have rendered price competition in the airlines all but non-existent," said Gary L. Severs and James C. Miller III, members of Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, in Congressional testimony.

Instead of competing with lower fares, they said, airlines seek to attract customers with fancier meals, free drinks, piano bars, expensive advertising, flashy interior color schemes, VIP airport lounges and more flights.

More recently, the established airlines have engaged in a commission war for the favors of travel agents, significantly increasing the amount they pay agents for writing tickets.

Would elimination of the promotional frills lower prices and encourage more persons to fly, thus providing higher plane capacities and more profitable airlines?

Advocates of deregulation say it would, citing the cheaper fares offered by profitable airlines that operate in California and Texas outside CAB and are successful.

Critics argue that discount fares, such as the popular excursion fares, are subsidized by passengers, who, for various reasons, are not able to plan their flights within the restrictions placed on promotional flights.

IRONICALLY, the customers most discriminated against by the airlines also are their biggest — the business travelers who spend $1 billion a year on air travel.

As soon as a particular kind of excursion attracts businessmen, they change the rules, said Bob Prairie, president of the National Passenger Traffic Association which represents corporate travel managers. "We're a captive market."

The airlines freely admit the special discount and tour packages are designed so business travelers cannot take advantage but must pay full coach or first class fares.

"They are not designed for the business traveler," a United official said. "He's expected to pay the full fare. That's the price he pays for having scheduled service available when he wants it — at peak times of demand."

The discounts are designed to attract persons who otherwise would not fly, airline officials say. They have attracted few new passengers in the last six months, mainly because of the recession.

Today regulars host 'America the Humorous' show tonight

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Barbara Walters, Jim Hartz and Gene Shalit, who appear regularly on NBC's early-morning "Today" program, get to stay up late tonight.

There will be a 90-minute special edition of "Today" at 11:30 this evening on Channel 4, with cohosts Walters and Hartz and panelist Shalit taking part.

It's called "Today at Night: America the Humorous," and the special will take a look at America's comedy tradition over the years in connection with the observance of the start of this nation's Bicentennial.

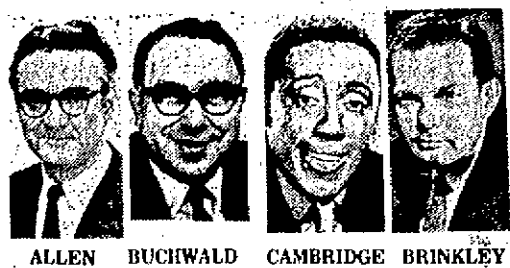

The "Today" regulars will be joined by a roster of humorists, satirists and wry observers, including Steve Allen, Orson Bean, Art Buchwald, David Brinkley, Abe Burrows, Geoffrey Cambridge, Rodney Dangerfield, Howard da Silva, Robert Klein, Max Morath, Jack Thomas and Mark Russell.

They will look into the humor of such Americans as Benjamin Franklin, Abraham Lincoln, Mark Twain, Peter Finley Dunne and Will Rogers, and filmed segments of movie, radio and TV comedians will be shown.

"KUNG FU," which had been finishing at or near the bottom of the Nielsen ratings for some time, had its final airing last Saturday night, and in its place, from 8 to 9 this evening on Channel 7, ABC is presenting a documentary special.

"ABC News Closeup: What's Happened Since..." is the title of the program, which presents follow-up reports on the investigations conducted for several programs in the award-winning "Closeup" series of specials.

Tonight's program reports on steps that have been taken to correct conditions disclosed in earlier specials — and looks into situations where there has been inaction.

ALLEN BUCHWALD CAMBRIDGE BRINKLEY

Topics getting the most in-depth follow-ups are "Food: Green Grow the Profits," "Crashes: The Illusion of Safety," "IRS: A Question of Power" and "Fire!"

Next Saturday night, in the 8-to-9 time slot on Channel 7, a four-week summer comedy series, "Keep on uckin'," will make its bow.

"BOWLING for Dollars," which airs on Channel 5 from 7 to 7:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday, begins its fourth year this evening. The show, hosted by Chick Hearn, is the most popular Los Angeles program in its time period, according to KTLA.

More than half a million persons have sent in cards requesting to be in-studio bowling contestants in the past three years, and the selections are made by computer in Baltimore. Yet, against such tremendous odds, Ed Butcher of Long Beach has been picked twice as a contestant in a short period of time.

He was on the program May 28 and reports he will be on the one airing Monday.

FIRST-AID techniques will be shown on Channel 2's "Medix" from 3:30 to 4 p.m. Sunday. The program, hosted by Mario Machado, was produced with the cooperation of the American Red Cross. Dr. Ron Stewart, who trains paramedics, will take part.

"60 MINUTES," the CBS "newsmagazine" hosted by Mike Wallace and Morley Safer, moves to prime time for the summer, starting Sunday from 9:30 to 10:30 p.m. on Channel 2. It fills the spot formerly occupied by "Mannix," which has been shifted to Wednesday night.

Beverly Sills, Metropolitan Opera star, is scheduled to be interviewed on Sunday's program.

"PHONE POWER," a new call-in radio talk show hosted by Chuck Ashman, will make its debut from 9 p.m. to midnight Sunday on Long Beach station KNAC (105.5 FM). It will be a regular Sunday night program.

"RYAN'S HOPE," a new daytime drama serial, and two new game shows begin Monday on Channel 7 and one new game show begins on Channel 4. And "A Ryan's Hope" Preview" will air on Channel 7 from 10:15 to 10:30 p.m. Sunday, following the Sophia Loren movie "Lady Liberty."

The soap opera will air from 1 to 1:30 p.m., Monday.

Reunited team

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Elaine May and Mike Nichols, former comedy partners, reunited to record radio commercials for his new film, "The Fortune."

day through Friday. ABC's game shows making their bow Monday are "Rhyme and Reason," hosted by Bob Eubanks, at 11:30 a.m., and "You Don't Say," hosted by Tom Kennedy, at noon.

NBC will introduce "The Magnificent Marble Machine," a word game series, at 11 a.m. Monday on Channel 4. Art James is the host, and the first week's celebrity guests will be Florence Henderson and Roddy McDowall.

'Now I can have beer and ice cream'

N.Y. Times Service
WIMBLEDON, England—As if possessed in her final Wimbledon singles match by the inner strength of all her causes, Billie Jean King needed only 39 minutes Friday in winning her sixth championship. Some ladies need more time than that to get dressed. Quickly again, Billie Jean the competitor had changed into Billie Jean the lady in a green sweater over a green flowered blouse and green slacks. She sat down with a can of diet soda at a classroom-type desk and a tape recorder was politely slid toward her.

"Stick it right up here," Billie Jean King suggested. "Go after it."
Go after it. Chisel that in the marble of Wimbledon champions instead of her name. Going after it has been her life and Friday she was rewarded, 6-0, 6-1, over Evonne Goolagong Cawley, her easiest important victory. From either side of the net, the court was downhill. The net seldom was too high. The chalklines seldom were too close. After all the controversy that has swirled around perhaps the most persistent women's libber of all, her dominance Friday was a reminder that she deserves to be remembered among the genuinely great players in tennis history.

The oldtimers treasure Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills Moody and Maureen Connolly Brinker, but the newtimers treasure Billie Jean King, as she will be treasured forever. Not just for winning, but for winning her way and for living her way.

"I think I played out of my brain," she was saying now. "I don't think Evonne knew what hit her. Everything was close to the net, she couldn't read it, she couldn't see it. I told myself if I got ahead, I wasn't going to let up. Don't let her get back in the match. Watch the ball and play the ball and not think of who I'm playing. I know Evonne is so dangerous when she's behind and when she won that game, I told myself, oh, no!"

Not until the fifth game of the second set did Mrs. Cawley, the recent bride of a London metals salesman, get on the scoreboard.

"I told myself to keep a sense of urgency in me and not let up,"

Billie Jean continued. "I kept telling myself: This is another World Team Tennis set. I've been dreaming and thinking about Wimbledon and it really makes you play."

"WHAT WAS YOUR feeling," somebody asked, "when the match ended?"

"Relief," she said. "I was just so happy it's over. What a way to end my career."

She has announced this was her last major singles tournament.

"When I was young I dreamed about coming to Wimbledon and now I've won it six times. When I was with the Sets in New York or on the road, I'd wake up thinking I was in the Wimbledon final that day; that's how much I've been thinking about it. Today when I woke up, I realized, oh, no, it's for real. But now it's cemented even more."

But she has been a lady of history, not merely tennis history.

"I think I've been the most fortunate woman athlete who ever lived up to this time. I hope some younger player can say that eventually, but I was able to see a lot of firsts. Anytime you're a leader or try to change anything, you're held up to ridicule. But you're still a person. Fight for equality. Fight for prize money. But there's no way an athlete plays for anything but to win."

She sniffled, took out a handkerchief and blew her nose.

"I've got a virus and hay fever," she said. "I took a cortisone shot, antibiotics, nose drops, eye drops, but I couldn't take antihistamines."

"If you'd been well," somebody suggested, "perhaps you wouldn't have dropped that game."

"In your career," somebody asked, "did you ever get beaten the way you beat Evonne today?"

"I lost to Chrissie (Evert) in

Billie Jean wins sixth Wimbledon singles title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Billie Jean King won the Wimbledon tennis crown for the sixth time Friday and bowed out of major tournament singles play on an all-time high.

She battered 1971 winner Evonne Goolagong Cawley of Australia, 6-0, 6-1, in the most one-sided women's final since Doris Hart defeated Shirley Fry, 6-1, 6-0, 24 years ago.

"That's it," said Ms. King, 31, who has thrilled Wimbledon crowds since she came here as Billie Jean Moffitt 15 years ago. "I will not play singles at Forest Hills and I may come back here for doubles."

"When I say I'm quitting, I mean it."

Many of the 17,000 fans spent the night on the sidewalks outside the All-England Club to get a standing place for Ms. King's farewell. But it was anti-climactic.

About all they could say was that they were there when Ms. King equalled an all-time Wimbledon women's record by collecting her 19th title, including singles and doubles. Another Californian, Elizabeth Ryan, won 19 doubles crowns between the two world wars.

Perhaps today's men's final will provide the excitement they seek when defending champion Jimmy Connors, 22, and Arthur Ashe, at 31 a 12-year veteran of Wimbledon but never a winner, meet.

Mrs. Cawley could not put two good shots together. She managed only 10 points in the first set and 14 in the second. Ms. King could do no wrong. She served and volleyed and hit passing shots and lobs and had it wrapped up in 39 minutes.

Mrs. Cawley threw away one point after another. The crowd thought something was wrong with her. But her past record was true to form. When she is good, she is very good, when she is bad, she is awful. She is known for lapses in concentration, "walkabouts," as they are known in the Australian outback.

Her husband of three weeks, British businessman Roger Cawley, said: "There was nothing wrong with her. When she went on court she was no less confident than for any other match. It was just one of those things."

Evonne began the match with a double-fault and lost her service at love. In the next game she forced Billie Jean to three deuces, but that was the only time she got into the match until she won her only game—the fifth of the second set.

Washington earns raise, rips Angels

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

OAKLAND—Nothing, it would appear, surprises Claudell Washington.

"I remember I raised my eyebrows a little when I got the raise," the 20-year-old phenom paused to say Friday night after his four hits helped Kenny Holtzman and the Oakland A's to an easy 6-0 victory over the Angels.

A's owner Charles O. Finley who, of course, likes to do things differently, dropped into the Oakland dugout one day last week to announce a $10,000 raise in salary for his second-year outfielder, already on the periphery of superstardom.

Washington's present $32,000 salary returned its first dividend Friday for Finley.

Before the Fourth of July fireworks exploded on the post-game show at the Oakland Coliseum for the benefit of 40,879—a figure which proves baseball isn't quite moribund on the East Bay—Washington made Finley's eyes light up with his third four-hit night of the year which lifted his batting average into the high rent district at .315.

This is a figure which does not surprise Washington, either.

"I consider myself a 300 hitter...always have," he said politely and matter-of-factly.

Munching on some ribs especially imported from a nearby eatery, Washington says he has no immediate plans for his new bankroll other than "to stick it in the bank and let it draw interest. But I do hope to buy a house for my mother in a year or two."

That should also tell you something about Claudell Washington.

Holtzman, winning for the sixth time in his last seven decisions, tossed his 26th career shutout and tamed the Angels for the ninth time in 12 verdicts with a smooth four-hitter.

The Angels, in fact, had only one base runner advance as far as second.

When it was over, Holtzman chose not to discuss his own craftsmanship but rather the way Frank Tanana impressed him.

Tanana, whose four-game winning streak came to an abrupt halt, was locked in a scoreless duel for four innings before Bill North—with 13 RBI—stroked a two-run single to center with two out in the fifth.

After that it was all downhill for Tanana as the A's helped themselves to three more unearned runs off the Angel starter, thanks to errors by outfielder Lee Stanton and

'The Count' can win, if only vs. Dodgers

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

John Montefusco, The Count, predicted confidently that he'd blank the Dodgers Friday night and that he'd do it on five hits.

"I made a mistake," the ever-confident Montefusco said after his EIGHT-HIT, 1-0, shutout of the Dodgers before a turn-away Dodger Stadium crowd of 52,621.

"But this one was for Ron Cey," the brash San Francisco right-hander said after the game, which dropped the Dodgers back to eight games behind Cincinnati in the National League West.

"I understand he said that I'd never win 10 games. He said that I wasn't that good of a pitcher. Well, I guess the only way I'll get those 10 wins is to pitch against the Dodgers."

To be sure, the win was Montefusco's sixth in nine decisions and three of the wins have come against the Dodgers.

"I love pitching against the Dodgers," he went on. "I was really up for this one, believe me. This was my greatest pitching job."

"What I'm really happy about is that it came before the All-Star game. I really want to make the All-Star team. I just hope Alston was watching closely."

Walter Alston, who will manage the National League All-Stars, was watching all right, but he was disturbed with the Dodgers' inability to cash in on their many opportunities than he marveled at Montefusco's pitching.

The Dodgers had runners aboard against Montefusco in every inning except the first. They stranded 11 for the game, including two in the ninth when it appeared they might finally get to Montefusco.

But after giving up a two-out pinch single to Leron Lee and then walking Dave Lopes, Montefusco got Bill Buckner to pop up on a 3-2 pitch.

"I was so glad to see

Dodger of Day

STEVE GARVEY tripped, singled and stole base in 1-0 loss to Giants.

that pop," he said. "When I was really nervous, I wanted that shutout so much."

He didn't want the shutout anymore than Buckner wanted the hit. After popping up, Buckner slammed his helmet to the ground. It bounced up, struck him in the face and after the game he was receiving four stitches in his forehead.

An inning earlier, the Dodgers had their best opportunity to get even.

Steve Garvey shot a one-out triple that was inches fair down the left-field line. Cey was next, but grounded to third, not sufficient enough to score Garvey, and then Montefusco got rookie John Hale to pop up.

"Cey had his chance, too," the cocky, refreshing Montefusco reminded his listeners.

Andy Messersmith took the loss, his fifth in 17 decisions, but was hardly embarrassed. The Giants' only run came on an infield out in the fifth inning when Bobby Murcer barreled into shortstop Bill Russell that prevented a double play. As he did, Derrel Thomas pranced home with the only run of the game.

But it was clearly a

Montmartre, Pass the Glass win Toro sizzles at Hollypark

Chilean jockey Fernando Toro strengthened his stature as the top grass course rider in the West Friday when he rode Montmartre and Pass the Glass to victories in $75,000-added divisions of the American Handicap at Hollywood Park.

Toro used different tactics in his two wins as he brought Pass the Glass from last place to win the first division and then took Montmartre to the front shortly after the start and kept him there to score a length triumph.

Pass the Glass beat favored Big Band by a neck while Against The Snow finished third.

Ancient Title and Stardust Mel, generally considered the top handicap horses in the West, were the horses to beat on the second division. Ancient Title was third and Stardust Mel finished out of the money.

Longshot Top Crowd was runner-up to Montmartre.

Although ranked as a grass specialist, Montmartre had not won a race since January and was sent off by a turnout of 40,630 at odds of 20-1. He paid $13.20, $17 and $6.40. Top Crowd's prices were $46 and $12.60 while Ancient Title returned $3.

Montmartre raced the mile and an eighth on the turf in 1:49 3-5 while Pass the Glass' time was 1:48 1-5.

Ancient Title, carrying high weight of 128 pounds, stayed closest to Montmartre until the stretch run where he dug in gameily but could not hold off Top Crowd, which packed 115 pounds; Montmartre also carried 115.

For his victory, Montmartre earned $51,850 from the gross purse of $65,550 for owner William Brelliant, who purchased the 5-year-old last year for $100,000.

In the first division, Pass the Glass lagged in last place until the field approached the second turn. He came between horses to get into striking position and then went to the outside for his stretch drive.

As second choice in the wagering, Pass the Glass paid $8.20, $4.20 and $3.60. Big Band was worth $4 and $3.60 while Against The Snow returned $6.

The victory was worth $53,850 from a gross purse

Title shots

on line in Olympic main

Former world bantamweight champion Rafael Herrera of Mexico City fights for another title shot tonight when he meets countryman Famoso Gomez at the Olympic Auditorium.

The two are scheduled for 10 rounds with two other 10-round co-features.

Aileen Eaton, the Olympic promoter, says she has made an offer for a title bout matching the winner against the current champion.

One offer went to Rodolfo Martinez of Mexico, the bantamweight champion, and another to Alex Arguello of Nicaragua, the featherweight king.

Gomez fights as a featherweight and cannot make the 118-pound bantamweight limit, but Herrera still is able to make that weight, therefore the two offers.

Sun hosts San Antonio in '75 debut

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

Six months ago, it appeared as though the World Football League had sputtered out after one disastrous season.

But tonight, a reorganized and financially stronger WFL hopes to return with a display of football fireworks when the Southern California Sun meets the San Antonio Wings in a 7:30 preseason game at Anaheim Stadium.

The Sun will offer something old, veteran quarterback Daryle Lamonica, and something new, former USC star Anthony Davis, for a crowd that is expected to be around 15,000.

"WE'RE GOING to have a better football team than the one we had last year," said coach Tom Fears after viewing the Sun in scrimmages at the club's UC Irvine training camp.

Fears is particularly happy about the infusion of winners such as former USC players Davis, Pat Haden and John McKay, all of whom played on two national championship teams at Troy.

"Davis has looked good, although I still don't think he's in top shape," said Fears. "He made a touchdown run in a scrimmage the other day that wasn't long (11 yards), but it was about as good as you'll see."

The Sun hopes to win the toss and receive the kickoff. The SoCals will have three burners deep—Davis, who holds the NCAA record with six touchdown returns at USC; Stan Brown, a 4.4 speedster from Purdue who held the NCAA mark before Davis, and fleet Keith Denison from San Diego, who was a top receiver for the Southern California team last season.

FEARS PLANS to send two quarterbacks against the Wings, who are new to the league. Lamonica, who played 12 seasons with the Oakland Raiders of the National Football League before jumping to the WFL, will open the game.

"Daryle is the kind of take-charge guy we need," said Fears. "He's been throwing the ball well."

Haden, who will play 11 games with the Sun before going to England to fulfill a Rhodes Scholarship commitment, will quarterback the Sun in the second half.

"Haden has been just great," says Fears. "You can't believe the way he picks up things so quickly. I knew he was good, but I had no idea he was as talented as he is."

McKay, injured for a spell at training camp, figures to see considerable action.

Fears is pleased with his defense, headed by tackles Dave Rolter, end Charlie DeJurnett and linebackers Eric Patton and Jim Baker.

"We have good talent all the way around," he said.

Fears admitted to knowing little about San Antonio, except for quarterback Gary Valbuena, who was traded by the Sun early in the week for running back Paul Miles.

"Valbuena should be ready to play some against us," said Fears. "and if we have any weak spots, he'll know where they are."

John Walton, who was with Houston last season, is the No. 1 quarterback for the Wings.

Other well-known members of the Wings are veteran linebacker Lonnie Warwick, tight end Willie Prazier and end Rick Cash, a former Ram.

Anthony Davis tees shirts will be given to all youngsters 16 and under attending tonight's game.

The Sun secondary will be severely tested with cornerbacks Jack Connors and Jim Williams plus strong safety Eric Johnson sidelined with injuries.

Ken Jackson, another defensive back, has been placed on the injured reserve list with broken hands. Joining him are offensive tackle Ed Kezerian and linebacker Bobby Henderson.

The Sun made three player trims Friday, cutting defensive Harry Thompson, wide receiver Ron Thomas and running back Larry McCutcheon (brother of the Rams' Lawrence McCutcheon).

At L.A. State Summer cage league opens

The Southern California Pro Basketball Summer League begins its fifth season of operation tonight at L.A. State with games at 7 and 9.

The pros will play Tuesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings through mid-August. In addition, a women's league has been added this year to go with the high school development league.

Four of the teams in the summer league are sponsored by two pro clubs—the Lakers/Portland Trailblazers, Milwaukee Bucks/Kentucky Colonels, Golden State Warriors/Kansas City Kings, Philadelphia 76ers/Cleveland Cavaliers.

Wall Spectator boats hamper start 65 Yachts set sail for Hawaii

By DONNELL
CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

Sixty-five blue-water yachts started their journey to Honolulu Friday in the 28th biennial renewal of the Transpacific Yacht Race from San Pedro to Hawaii.

The race had a hectic beginning for many skippers. The ocean was crowded with spectator craft that seemed to be in the way of every boat in the race.

Veteran observers said that they never had seen so many spectator boats.

The start was smooth, however, with a southwest wind of about eight knots.

The highly touted favorite, Ragtime, 62-foot sloop of the Long Beach Yacht Club, pulled a maneuver at the start that gave her the lead over the line just ahead of three others—John M. Calley's 53-foot sloop, Sunset Boulevard (California YC), Larry Bradley's 37-foot sloop, Conception (CYC) and Jacob D. Woods' 61-foot sloop, Sorcery (also CYC).

Ragtime, with both owners, Dr. William White and William Pasquini as co-skippers, took a head almost due west for the first 20 minutes, then tacked on a line almost straight for the west end of Catalina Island.

Sorcery caught up with Ragtime and passed her about four miles off Marineland. Forty minutes out of the starting line, Sorcery was 300 yards ahead of Ragtime, but such a lead meant little when one considers that the boats will be racing nine days or longer, depending on wind conditions.

There was so much congestion in the staging area that Bruce Adam had difficulty in maneuvering his big schooner, Constellation, which is a 73-footer, among the small craft. Twelve minutes after the starting gun, the Long Beach YC skipper still was trying to nudge Constellation across the line.

Constellation, however, wasn't the last boat out. Nick Alexander, skippering Celox, a 40-foot sloop from the Cruising YC of Australia, brought up the rear. There had been some talk that Celox wouldn't be ready in time. Alexander was putting the finishing touches on Celox Thursday night at the Balboa YC.

Serena, Hilaria, Defiant and Concubine were among the last boats to cross the starting line.

The Transpac record is held by Mark Johnson's 73-foot ketch, which made the trip in nine days, nine hours, 6 minutes and 18 seconds to beat Blackfin.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Major league baseball, low-priced entertainment in these troubled times, is expected to achieve an all-time attendance record of over 15 million over the holiday weekend.

Attendance around the majors through Wednesday night's games totaled 14,217,940, an increase of five per cent over last year, and the 15 million mark is expected to be breached in the next three days.

In New York, for instance, it costs as much as $15 for an orchestra seat for a Broadway show and $5 is often general admission price for a first-run movie. Prime seats at pro-hockey, basketball and football games normally is $10 or more. But the best seat in the house at either a Mets or Yankee game is $4.50 or less.

Biggest jumps belong to the Dodgers and Yankees, each up more than 211,000 over the same number of playing dates a year ago. Thirteen major league teams show increases so far this season, eight of them in the American League.

CHICAGO CUBS outfielder Jose Cardenal and his wife, Patricia, were arrested for allegedly beating a policeman at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

Police said the incident occurred when patrolman Dennis Dickson asked Mrs. Cardenal to move her car from in front of a departure terminal to accommodate other autos. When he returned later, Mrs. Cardenal had not moved the car. Dickson then asked her to move it again. When he returned a third time, Cardenal had joined his wife in the front seat and shouted an obscenity at him.

Dickson said he then began writing a ticket for the car, and Cardenal got out of the vehicle and began "beating me." He said Mrs. Cardenal also joined in the fight, kicking him.

WITH THE voting in its final hours, three starting positions were still not decided for the National League All-Star team.

First baseman Steve Garvey of the Dodgers, a write-in choice last year, remained in a tight race with Cincinnati's Tony Perez for the starting job in the July 15 game. In the outfield, it's a close choice between five players—Lou Brock, Reggie Smith, Del Unser, Rusty Staub and Jimmy Wynn.

A BASEBALL museum named after the winning pitcher in major league history was officially opened in Newcomerstown, Ohio. The Cy Young Museum, dedicated to a man who posted 511 victories in his career from 1880 to 1911, opened its doors amid a festive Fourth of July atmosphere.

POLAND'S Irena Szewinska bettered the world record for the women's 300 meters Friday with a time of 35.7 in an international track meet in London. America's Kenny Randle outraced British champion David Jenkins in the 300 meters to win in 32.4, a United Kingdom all-comers record. Jenkins was clocked in the same time set by Herb McKelway of Jamaica 18 years ago. The only other U.S. winner was Tom Staying, who won the 3,000 meters in 7:55.2.

Mike Bolt of Kenya won the 800 meters in 1:48.6, a tenth of a second in front of Rick Wohlhuter.

Russians assume huge lead on visiting Yanks

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (AP)—Soviet track stars, led by Olympic gold medalist Valery Borzov, dominated a weary American men's team and Soviet women blasted their American opponents on the opening day of a two-day track and field meet.

Soviet men won six of the nine events and led, 55-39, while Soviet women won all but one of seven events and had 49 points compared with 24 for the Americans.

The meet, cancelled and later rescheduled after a squabble over television rights, was hastily assembled and some U.S. competitors, including Bill Shuff of Lafayette, La., arrived in Kiev only four hours before the start of the meet.

Both the hammer throw and the pole vault were delayed until today, the latter because the Americans' poles had not arrived.

U.S. coach Lee Calhoun had asked that the meet be termed "friendly" with no points tallied, but the Soviets declined.

Joni Huntley of Sheridan, Ore., won the women's high jump at 6-1/2 feet, with Stan Vinson, Detroit the winner in 45.8. Robert Taylor, Dickinson, Texas, fought off Soviet Semyon Kocher for second.

Otherwise, the Soviet women almost swept the board, also taking the sprints and the 400-meter relay.

In the men's competition, Borzov tied his national record in the 100 at 10.0 and came back to anchor the Soviet team to a meet record of 38.7 seconds in the 400 relay.

A bright spot was provided by Mike Shine, Youngsville, Pa., who stepped off a plane less than 24 hours before the meet began and won the 400-hurdles on the surface slickened by a day-long downpour. His 50.0 was his best of the season.

Russians swept the javelin, 100 dash, 10,000 meters and the triple jump.

But Ken Popejoy Glen Ellyn, Ill., brought the men's team back with a victory in the 1,500, winning in 3:42.6. Steve Heidreich, another late American arrival, took second place.

In the 400, the American

Fort Lauderdale, love and one; I got annihilated. I lost to Margaret (Court), one and two, but that was a long time ago. I wasn't a player then."

"How much did you really prepare to win your final Wimbledon?"

"I PREPARED THE BEST I could prepare. I never worked harder. I never trained harder. I told myself if somebody plays better, fair enough; if you have a bad day, that was fair enough, too, because I had prepared the best I could. I sacrificed my time with friends, I sacrificed movies and plays. This fortnight, I went back to my hotel and had room service because I wanted to save all my energy for the matches."

"How are you going to celebrate your title?"

"I don't know. In my first year at Wimbledon, I shared a room for $1.20 a night, including breakfast. All we ate were hamburgers and french fries. When I left I'd put on so much weight I couldn't button my skirt."

"I remember in 1961 when I won my first doubles title here. Bud Collins treated Karen Hantze and me to a spaghetti dinner," she said, alluding to the TV commentator and Boston Globe columnist. "That was the first time I hadn't eaten at Wimpy's hamburger place. I love that junk stuff."

Billie Jean King laughed and her eyes laughed behind her glasses.

"But tonight I know one thing. I will have some beer and ice cream."

U.S. leads, 100-79 McTear zips to Junior win

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Three Americans, including sprint sensation Houston McTear, got in on four of the six records broken Friday on the first round of the two-day fourth annual Russian-American junior track meet.

At the end of the first day's competition, the U.S. men's team led, 64-53, and the American girls, 36-26, for a combined 100-79 advantage.

McTear, 18, Baker, Fla., who tied the world 100-yard dash record of 9.0 two months ago, dominated his two events, drawing hushed attention from the crowd in the moments before his races started.

He took the 100 meters in 10.2, tying the meet record set by Michigan State's Marshall Dill in 1972. As leadoff runner he gave his 440 relay unit a 10-foot edge at the first baton pass. The team of McTear, Dwayne Strozier, Joel Andrews and Lamar Preyor was clocked in 39.6, tying the old standard set by an American team in 1972.

Brenda Morehead, 17, Toledo, O., ran the women's 100 in 11.4, topping the record of 11.54 by Russia's Ludmilla Yushatkin in 1972. Chadra Chesborough, 16, Jacksonville, Fla., was second, also in 11.4.

Miss Morehead was leadoff runner on the record-breaking 440-relay record, timed in 44.8. The old mark was 45.25 by an American team last year.

Paul Jordan, 18, Philadelphia, had a 53-9 effort in the triple jump.
